Supreme Court Decisions Hit Police Abuses

Civil Rights of Criminal Suspects Are Stressed in Three Reversals

(Related Stories, Page 6)

By Murrey Marder
Post Reporter

Sharp warnings against abuses in the arrest, arraignment and trial of criminal suspects were given by the Supreme Court yesterday in three significant civil rights decisions.

The high court, in widely split opinions:

1. By a 6 to 3 vote, reversed the gambling convictions of two Washington men in a case where police forced their way into a rooming house here and discovered evidence by peeping over a transom.

2. By a 5 to 4 vote, reversed the grand larceny conviction of another Washington man, because the confession which convicted him was obtained through an illegal 30-hour detention.

3. By a 6 to 3 vote, reversed the Pennsylvania Supreme Court which had denied a new hearing to a 17-year-old who was tried and convicted of burglary without being advised of his right to counsel.

No Warrant Obtained

In the transom-peeping case, police entered a rooming house through a bedroom window, without a search warrant, and went through a hall. Then an officer on a chair peeped through a transom to see suspects Earl H. McDonald and Joseph F. Washington with numbers slips, cash and an adding machine.

Justice Douglas, for the majority, said there was no excuse whatsoever for such entry without a warrant, inasmuch as police had McDonald under surveillance for three months.

The Fourth Amendment, he declared, "has interposed a magistrate between the citizen and the police" to weigh such issues and provide warrants where necessary.

"Power is a heady thing," said he, "and history shows that the police acting on their own cannot be trusted."

Jackson Explains

Justice Jackson, who agreed with the decision, took opportunity in a separate opinion to explain why the majority reached its decision. He labeled law enforcement of that type a "shocking proposition," both "reckless and so fraught with danger to the law enforcement agencies themselves."

If a woman, in such a case, he said, saw a man in plainclothes enter her bedroom and she became alarmed and drew a gun, and the officer in turn drew his gun and shot her first, "I should not want the task of convincing a jury that it was not murder."

Justice Burton, writing a dissent in which Chief Justice Vinson and Justice Reed concurred, held that:

"This is a case of lawful arrest followed by a seizure of the

Truman Aide Hits Elaborate Inauguration

Inaugural ceremonies will be "10 times as large as President Truman wants them to be," Maj. Gen. Harry H. Vaughan, the White House military aide, asserted yesterday.

Deploring mushrooming plans for inauguration of his boss January 20, Vaughan told a Washington Post reporter he felt the "situation is getting out of hand."

Festivities will be "three times as big as they have any sense being," he declared.

A "four-hour parade" is "ridiculous," he asserted, adding:

"Ending the parade with a steam calliope is even more ridiculous."

At that point, Vaughan chided the last Congress for appropriating a "lot of money" for inaugural ceremonies at the Capitol, saying:

"They thought they would have a different leading lady."

Advised of Vaughan's remarks, Melvin D. Hildreth, 1949 inaugural chairman, at first declined to comment, and then said:

"The parade is not four hours long; it's 2½ hours. We have endeavored to give an expression of the great popular interest in the President."

Local Democrats have booked the forthcoming inauguration as the most elaborate in history. They talked tentatively at first of spending $150,000, but at present are trying to arrange a guarantee fund of $200,000.

The budget committee for the inauguration met yesterday, but didn't come to any definite conclusion about a fund outlay.

However, nearby Maryland and Virginia business men have each

Macy Orders New Hearings On Car Sales

Cherner Company Among Five Firms Called in Probe

Representative W. Kingsland Macy (R., N. Y.) yesterday ordered a new round of House hearings on automobile sales practices in metropolitan Washington.

The new hearings will start at 10 a. m. Wednesday in Room 1302 of the new House Office Building. Macy heads the House subcommittee investigating questionable trade practices.

Macy announced that officials of five Washington area automobile sales companies will testify.

The firms are the Cherner Motor Co., Ford dealers, of 1781 Florida ave. nw.; the Shirlington Motor Co., Lincoln and Mercury dealers, of 2790 S. Arlington Mill dr., Arlington, Va.; Auto Wholesalers, Inc., 1731 Bladensburg rd. ne.; Glasser's Used Car Co., of 155 Florida ave. ne., and Glasser's Used Cars, Inc., of 1 Florida ave. ne.

Joseph Cherner heads the Cherner and Shirlington firms. Cherner, according to his secretary at the Shirlington firm, would not comment on Macy's announcement of the hearing.

The Glasser firms are headed by Jack and Fred Glasser. They were not reached for comment.

Auto Wholesalers, Inc., is headed by Sam Michaelson, who declined to comment.

Officials of the Cherner firm testified in the first Macy auto hearings last mo•h, but appeared in minor roles. They told of buying several second-hand cars through the Kearney Oldsmobile Co., which had received them as trade-ins.

Arab Palestine Is Annexed by King Abdullah

Beirut, Lebanon, Dec. 13 (U.P.)—King Abdullah was proclaimed monarch of the Hashemite kingdom of Trans-Jordan and Palestine today, official reports from Amman said.

The proclamation meant that Abdullah had formally annexed Arab Palestine to Trans-Jordan.

(An Exchange Telegraph dispatch to London said both houses of parliament unanimously approved the unification of Trans-Jordan and Arab Palestine after a 16-hour session.)

Egypt's King Farouk, whose army in southern Palestine set up a separate Arab Palestine capital at Gaza, said Saturday he would never accept annexation by Abdullah. Syria and Saudi Arabia also have protested.

Nationalists May Retreat To Yangtze

Red Troops Within 50 Miles of Nanking; Hoffman Cites Terms For Continued Aid

(From Press Dispatches)

Nanking, Dec. 13.—Government military quarters predicted today that new Communist successes might soon force the Nationalists to fall back to the Yangtze River opposite this capital city.

The forecast was based on Communist infiltration to within 50 miles of Nanking and steady destruction of government forces in a Communist trap 145 miles to the northwest.

(In Shanghai today, Paul G. Hoffman, U. S. Economic Cooperation administrator, indicated American aid to China might continue if a coalition government replaced President Chiang Kai-shek's regime—provided the coalition were not Communist-dominated.

(Hoffman said in answer to a question: "If we were satisfied the government represented all the people, guaranteed their freedom and permitted operation of free institutions, free speech, free assembly and a free press, I would recommend that the ECA continue, and I think our Government would approve continuation.

("However, if we ascertained that a new government was beginning to enslave the people and suppress free institutions, ECA would get out.")

Well-informed Chinese government sources acknowledged the Twelfth Army Group, encircled for 17 days, had lost more than half its 110,000 men and might soon be wiped out entirely. The Twelfth is compressed into a four-square-mile area and is critically short of food and ammunition.

There was no fresh word on another large force trapped for more than a week about 40 miles northwest of the Twelfth Group's position.

Gen. Ku Chu-tung, government chief of staff, said government forces in the disputed area outnumbered the Reds, 350,000 to 300,000. Most of the government troops are in the Red traps, however.

Communists who infiltrated past the government's Hwai River defense line, 100 miles north of Nanking, were reported Sunday to have cut the railway only 50 miles from Nanking.

The communications ministry said this break had now been repaired, but other sources said the vital supply line was being cut almost daily in different places.

Petting Charges Rock Jap Diet; Minister Resigns

Tokyo (Tuesday), Dec. 14 (U.P.)—Finance Minister Sanroku Izumiyama resigned today from the Japanese Parliament after a 47-year-old woman member of the Diet charged he had made "improper advances" to her in the lobby.

The speaker of the House had to declare a recess to restore order last night when Mrs. Haruye Yamashita claimed Izumiyama embraced her.

The cabinet accepted Izumiyama's resignation, which admitted he had become drunk during a party earlier in the evening.

Izumiyama was not present when the charges were made. A Jiji Press reporter said he saw the Finance Minister asleep in the waiting room.

Another woman member, Mrs. Chiyo Sakakabara, 50, demanded to know Izumiyana's whereabouts. She told the House she had heard he had made "improper advances" to women members.

Mrs. Yamashita then took the floor and declared: "I was a direct victim of Izumiyama. He forced me out of the room into a corridor and embraced me.

"He told me, 'I love you.' I told him he had more important business to attend to, whereupon he said, 'You come before business.'"

Judges' Ruling Unanimous

Montgomery Charter Election Held Legal; Foes Plan Appeal

By Roger B. Farquhar
Post Reporter

The legality of Montgomery County's charter council election, scheduled for January 6, was upheld yesterday by the Montgomery County Circuit Court.

In their written unanimous opinion, the court's three judges brushed aside every point raised by F. Barnard Welsh, legal adviser for four Republican county commissioners, who questioned constitutionality of the election.

Welsh immediately announced appeal to the Maryland Court of Appeals at Annapolis.

Both Welsh and Frederic P. Lee, attorney for charter supporters, said they would submit briefs to the appellate court today. A hearing is expected Thursday and a ruling Friday or soon thereafter.

Yesterday's lower court opinion, signed by Chief Judge Charles W. Woodward and Associate Judges Stedman Prescott and Patrick J. Sehnauffer, held that Article 17 of the Maryland Constitution requiring quadrennial county elections, does not apply to the January 6 special election at which Montgomery County will elect seven members to its new county council.

The council was set up under the county charter adopted in a referendum November 2. Former county commissioners are now serving as interim councilmen.

In upholding the legality of the scheduled special election, the court declared:

"At first blush it would appear that there are distinct conflicts between Article 17 of the Constitu-

The electors of 48 States cast their votes for President yesterday, the net result being that President Truman lost one electoral vote in Tennessee to the States Righters.

The count, after this step in the Electoral College process, was: Democrat Truman 303, Republican Thomas E. Dewey 189, States Righter J. Strom Thurmond 39. A majority is required to elect.

Tennessee has 12 electoral votes. However, elector Preston Parks of Sommerville cast his vote for Thurmond as he had said in advance he would. He was exercising his constitutional right to vote for whomever he pleased, though a party's slate of electors traditionally goes in full for the party's nominees.

There have been four previous occasions since 1900 when a State's electoral vote was split: In 1904 and 1908 in Maryland, in 1912 in California and in 1916 in West Virginia.

New agitation is expected in the new Congress for changes in the presidential voting system.

The 531 men and women in the Electoral College met in State capitals yesterday to cast their votes, part of the procedure set up under a system 150 years old.

The next step in officially making Mr. Truman President for four more years will come January 6, when the Senate's presiding officer will open the returns from the Electoral Cllege, announce the results and declare the winner.

Md. Electors Vote for Dewey Amid Chaffing

By Dorothea Andrews
Post Reporter

Annapolis, Md., Dec. 13.—"Well, gentlemen, if you'll pull up chairs . . . It's noon, and we might as well get started."

That's what Maryland's Democratic Secretary of State said today to eight Republican electors meeting in the State House here.

And 45 minutes and 104 signatures later, the Maryland contingent of the Electoral College had officially cast its vote for Gov. Thomas E. Dewey for President of the United States, and for Gov. Earl Warren for Vice President.

Just a Formality

The vote result came as a surprise to nobody. As a matter of fact, "minutes" of the meeting, describing how the eight electors had voted, had been typed up in sextuplet well in advance of the meeting.

Copies of their "action" must go to these officials:

Two to the Secretary of State, United States; two to the Secretary of State, Maryland; one to the President of the United States Senate; one to the Judge of the United States Court for the District of Maryland.

In addition to signing each of the six copies of their "action" today, the eight electors also had to sign six "covering memoranda," to go with each of the six copies, certifying that what was in the six copies was what happened.

Yet Another Task

In addition, they had to sign the minute book, used in Maryland since 1840 to record for posterity the activities of the State's electors.

This minute book was described by Maryland Archivist Dr. Morris L. Radoff as a brown calf folio. Dr. Radoff has to go everywhere the book goes, but it is only brought out once each four years.

The folio itself, entitled "Record of the Minutes of the Presidential Electors of Maryland" has a history behind it. The Maryland Legislature found to its dismay back in 1840 that it had no record of how its electors had voted.

So it asked Congress for its records of the Maryland electoral vote, and started a book, written in longhand, which lists the results from 1789. In the first use of the presidential electorate, Maryland cast six votes for George Washington for the Presidency and six for Robert Hanson Harri-

Va. Electors Go Legal and Pick Truman

Special to The Post

Richmond, Va., Dec. 13.—Virginia's presidential electors, with the help of J. Howard McGrath and some preprinted forms, cast a solid vote for Harry S. Truman here today.

When initial off-stage noises subsided, the business at hand was concluded in short order. Nothing remained to be done but open a window and let out the smoke. The Twelfth Amendment was satisfied along with Article II.

Virginia's electors got off to an uneven start on their deliberations.

Seven Found Ineligible

At McGrath's request, Democratic Committeeman G. Fred Switzer of Harrisonburg, checked up on the electors' eligibility. To his dismay, it developed that 7 of the 11 held an office of "trust or profit" under the United States Government, in violation of Article II of the Constitution. Henry H. Fowler, Washington attorney, was sent down to help with legal advice.

After some hasty conversations, six of the seven resigned their positions—draft board, veterans affairs or savings bond posts. The rest organized with one seat vacant—that of Dr. W. N. Breckinridge of Fincastle, presidential elector from the Sixth District. He decided to keep his position as medical director of the Botetourt County Selective Service Board.

To replace him, the electors named his 28-year-old daughter, Louise. She thanked them so sweetly that they elected her secretary as well.

Then "Secret Ballot"

Delegate Paul Crockett of Yorktown, chosen president, observed that the time had come to cast a "secret ballot" for President of the United States. Levin Nock Davis, secretary of the State Board of Elections, stepped forward with some slips of paper. Just then Miss Breckinridge smile dat all hands, excused herself, and went down the hall.

"She has to break a luncheon date," said the Third District elector. "She'll be back as soon as she telephones her friend."

The slips of paper distributed by Davis turned out to be rather helpful. One read in bold face type, "for President of the United States of America—Harry S. Truman of the State of Missouri." The other identified Senator Barkley. A space was ar-

Truman Supports Pay Boost For Top Men in Government

By Jerry Kluttz
Post Reporter

The President yesterday pledged his wholehearted support of the proposal to raise the salaries of top-flight Federal executives, as a move got under way in Congress to put an "emergency" label on the legislation and approve it early next month.

The views of the President were presented to the Senate Civil Service Committee by Budget Director James E. Webb who refused to commit the Administration to another round of pay boosts for all Federal workers. Webb merely explained the matter was being studied.

During the hearing, Senator Flanders (R., Vt.) revealed a check was being made of members of both the Senate and the House to see if the bill could be passed before January 20 in order to give the President, Vice President and the Speaker substantial pay boosts. Unless the bill is passed before that date, a pay raise for the President couldn't be made effective for another four years.

A definite recommendation for the President's increase can be expected to be made today when the committee hears former President Herbert C. Hoover, who is chairman of the 12-man committee studying Government reorganization. An outright pay boost and increased allowances both were suggested by witnesses yesterday as a means of increasing the President's "take-home" pay.

Speaking for the President, Webb urged the committee to amend the Flanders-O'Connor-Baldwin bill to raise the salaries of Cabinet officers from $15,000 to $25,000. Also, to set up three levels of salaries—$17,500, $20,000 and $22,500—for little Cabinet members, agency heads, board and commission members and other top officials.

The committee bill would raise Cabinet members to $20,000 and fix the salaries of 200-odd other officials from $15,000 to $17,500. It would cost one million dollars a year, compared with $1,500,000 under the President's plan.

But as Comptroller General Lindsey Warren told the committee, the bill is a "measure of economy" instead of one of expense. He flatly predicted its cost would be saved many times through better management of Federal agencies. Warren pointed out that many executive jobs had gone begging for months, and that many people quit for better jobs in private industry just as they were becoming valuable to the Government.

Warren made a plea for substantial increases in both the salaries

College Aid Plan Adopted By Governors

14 Southern States Would Share Cost Of Meeting Top Educational Needs

Savannah, Ga., Dec. 13 (AP).—Governors and educators from 14 southern States late today adopted the Nation's first program of regional education.

After more than a year of talk, a unique and intricate plan was approved in which the States would contribute to meet the entire South's top needs in college education.

The initial program will be restricted to medical, dental and veterinary training—with emphasis on more and better education for Negroes under the South's traditional pattern of racial segregation.

Goes to Legislatures

The complex formula now goes to State legislatures with the sanction of the Southern Governors' Conference, meeting here concurrently with the Southern Regional Council of Education.

If the lawmakers agree to put up a recommended $1,736,000 for the first two years, the revolutionary share-the-wealth scheme will begin operating next fall.

The cost would total $2,434,000 a year when regional operations hit full pace after four years.

Governor Millard Caldwell of Florida, chairman of the Southern Governors' Education Committee, and Governor Preston Lane of Maryland, chairman of the Southern Governors' Conference, hailed today's action as an historical move to bring the South out of educational doldrums.

Action Unanimous

Approval was unanimous after Governors and educators met for two hours behind closed doors. None of the discussion was made public.

Southern Negroes will get their first state-sponsored medical training under the program. A $600,000 biennial fund was approved for Meharry Medical College for Negroes in Nashville, Tenn. The Governors had been warned the South's largest Negro medical school would close unless they came to the rescue.

Several Governors said they kept in mind a Supreme Court ruling demanding equal educational opportunity for Negroes. The Governors approved $355,000 for regional veterinary schools at the University of Georgia, Oklahoma A. & M., Auburn and Tuskegee Institute for Negroes.

States to Get Quotas

In each phase of the program, States will be assigned a specific quota of students to send to regional schools. The sending State will pay $1000 a year for veterinary students and $1500 for medical and dental students.

Unofficial estimates were that approximately half of the total outl... in the program would go for ... e and half for Negro student... The major facilities for Negroes would be the Meharry Medical College and the Tuskegee Veterinary School.

The regional council approved in principle but recommended no immediate funds for other proposed fields. Educators originally had recommended about $1,200,000 for graduate scholarships and subsidies to graduate schools. Another sizable sum had been suggested for research in Southern educational needs.

Spokesmen said these plans were not advanced enough to adopt specific appropriations.

The council has consisted of a Governor and two educators from each State. Rules were changed to add a third member from each State. A spokesman said this was to permit Negro representation on the council if a Governor wants to appoint a Negro.

Each State would put up $14,000 in the first two-year budget to administer the regional program.

Eight States which have no dental schools agreed to try to chip in $45,000 each to send students to other States where dental schools are under way. The eight are Arkansas, Florida, Maryland, Missis-

U. S. Apathy Worried Him

Wadleigh Dreaded Fascism Rise in Europe, Wife Asserts

By John London
Post Reporter

Henry Julian Wadleigh, former State Department economist, "dreaded the rise of fascism in Europe" in 1937-1938, the years when he allegedly relayed secret documents to a Communist agent.

"He felt the people in this country were not yet fully aware of the menace of fascism and he was disturbed by the apathy of our Government," his wife told a reporter for The Washington Post last night.

Having lived and received much of his education abroad as a youth, Mrs. Wadleigh said, "he naturally felt strongly about the threat to the European democracies."

Asked what her husband said he had felt impelled to do in those years to remedy the situation while he was in the State Department trade agreements division, Mrs. Wadleigh replied, "He hasn't talked to me about that."

"I don't know if he's innocent or guilty, but he's a person of great honesty and integrity. Whatever he did would have been in the hope of helping this country," she added.

A native of New York and a former Washington church school teacher, Mrs. Wadleigh said she met her husband in 1940 and married him in 1941. They have three children, aged 2½, 4½ and 6½, and live near Vienna, Va. Wadleigh is divorced from his first wife, a naturalized native of New Zealand, Mrs. Wadleigh said.

Wadleigh refused last week to answer questions before the House Un-American Activities Commit-

Three of His Aides Only Had Access To Some Papers, Mundt Declares

By Robert C. Albright
Post Reporter

Casting about for new leads on who stole the "Pumpkin Papers," the House Committee on Un-American Activities last night:

1. Invited former Assistant Secretary of State Francis B. Sayre, from whose office some of the papers were taken, and Sayre's former secretary, Isabel Newcomb, to testify.

2. Announced that it may request former Communist Whittaker Chambers, Alger and Donald Hiss and other top witnesses in its Red spy investigation to take lie detector tests.

Search Declared Narrowed

Acting Chairman Karl E. Mundt (R., S. Dak.) said investigators have determined that only four persons had access to some of the purloined documents—those bearing the stamp of Sayre's former State Department office.

He said the four persons were Sayre and Miss Newcomb, who are now en route home from Europe and have never been before the committee, and Alger Hiss and his former secretary, Eunice Lincoln, who have already been questioned.

Hiss, assistant to Sayre during the 1937-38 period when Chambers charged the papers were stolen, has denied he ever made any documents available to Chambers, and his libel action against Chambers for calling him a Communist is now pending.

Miss Lincoln was examined in closed session by the committee last week and her testimony was never made public.

Papers Kept Locked Up

Mundt said committee investigators had found out that the Sayre-stamped documents were "kept under lock and key" in a file in Sayre's office, and only these four had access to it. He said the key wasn't kept in the custody of any one of them, but was "hidden" in the office.

Sayre is now the United States Representative on the United Nations Trusteeship Council and Miss Newcomb is on his staff. Mundt said both Sayre and Miss Newcomb are now on the high seas but will be back in time for questioning December 20.

"We intend to subpena them or ask them to come," Mundt said.

Still seeking a typewriter suspected of having been used in making copies of top secret documents after they were removed from the State Department, Mundt said investigators haven't yet found the typewriter, but "we have some very interesting clews leading to it."

Hiss Rejected Test Offer

Mundt said the committee will decide within the next two or three days whether to ask the top witnesses to take lie detector tests.

The committee last summer invited Chambers and Alger Hiss, the first man he accused, to take the test. Mundt said Chambers agreed to take the test and Hiss first took it "under advisement" and then decided against it. Hiss said the test was not regarded as fully accurate by scientists.

Asked if he considered the tests accurate, Mundt said:

"The best information we can

Carnegie Fund Rejects Hiss Resignation

Soviet Spy Probe Figure Granted Leave for 3 Months

New York, Dec. 13 (AP).—Alger Hiss, a principal in the Soviet spy investigation, submitted his resignation as head of the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace today, but trustees tabled the resignation. He was granted a three-month leave of absence.

Hiss is accused by Whittaker Chambers of delivering secret Government papers to Chambers, a self-confessed Soviet espionage courier. John W. Davis, acting chairman of the board of trustees, said the trustees tabled the resignation and granted Hiss a leave of absence instead.

Hiss, in his letter to the endowment board, referred to the "very serious charges" made by Chambers and his subsequent disavowals of them. Declaring that investigations and legal proceedings as a result would occupy most of his time for "weeks to come," Hiss added.

"Because of these facts and to eliminate any possible embarassment to the endowment from my continued connection with it, I hereby tender my resignation as a trustee and as president of the endowment."

The post pays $20,000 annually. Davis said Hiss would receive his full salary while on leave of absence.

The general purpose of the Carnegie Endowment, founded by Philanthropist Andrew Carnegie, is "to hasten the abolition of international war." The endowment arranges lectures and meetings in the United States and abroad "to advance the cause of pease among nations . . . and to aid in the acceptance by all nations of the principles of international law."

Two Jet, Rocket Research Centers Are Established

New York, Dec. 13 (NYHT).—The creation of national centers of rocket and jet propulsion research at Princeton University and California Institute of Technology was announced today at the Guggenheim Foundation.

The two new institutions will be known as the Daniel and Florence Guggenheim Jet Propulsion Centers. The foundation has underwritten the research centers for seven years and has appropriated $500,000.

The foundation also is establishing two jet propulsion fellowships which will carry two-year grants of up to $2000 annually, for study leading to advanced degrees. Normally, six new fellowships will be granted each year—three for study at Princeton and three for study at Caltech.

Webb Asks Pay Rises for U. S. Top-Shots, But Budget Boss Draws Only $10,000

On behalf of the President, Jim Webb, the Budget Bureau director, yesterday urged Congress to raise the pay of top Government officials, in order to retain high-quality executives in the Federal service.

JAMES E. WEBB
Director of the Budget

Jim Webb was officially speaking up for a lot of John Smiths, but like John Alden, he might well have spoken up for himself.

As director of the Budget Bureau, James Edwin Webb gets $10,000 a year for supervising, among other things, the complex, controversial multi-billion-dollar budget of Uncle Sam. Through a quirk in the law, several of Webb's aides get more than their boss—$10,335.

Lucrative Job Offers

There have been numerous reports that Webb himself has been tempted to quit the Government to take jobs in industry at from $40,000 to $75,000 a year. Friends say that Webb has turned down all offers out of loyalty to President Truman, who two years ago whisked Webb out of relative obscurity and plopped him into one of the most responsible jobs in the country.

Jim Webb was an executive assistant to the late Undersecretary of the Treasury, O. Max Gardner, when elevated to the near-Cabinet position in July of '46. The President was sold on Webb as a high-speed, high-tension individual who thinks fast and acts fast. And so he is. No matter how onerous or painstaking his day's work, square-jawed Jimmy Webb always appears to be a ball of fire ready to blaze forth with new energy.

From North Carolina

A native of Granville County, N. C., where his father has been superintendent of schools for many years, Webb worked his way through the University of North Carolina. It took him five years to get his degree because he left school for one year to earn his tuition.

Jim turned to law, but interrupted his training to serve two years in the Marine Corps air unit as a flier. Since, he has kept up an active interest in aviation developments, and in the Marine Corps Reserves.

In '32, Jim became secretary to Representative Edward W. Pou (D., N. C.), chairman of the House Rules Committee, and studied law at George Washington University. His animated ability caught the eye of O. Max Gardner, former Governor of North Carolina, and he was asked to join Gardner's law firm here. Two years later, Webb passed the District bar exams.

Another North Carolinian, Thomas Morgan, president of Sperry Gyroscope, then called on Webb's services in '36, and in the next seven years Webb rose to be secretary and treasurer of the corporation at a salary around twice his present pay.

In '44, he went on active duty with the Ninth Marine Aircraft Wing, trained personnel in radar and electronics. He came out of the war a major.

After the war, Webb reentered the law firm of Gardner, Morrison and Rogers here, and the following year, in March, 1946, went to the Treasury to serve with Undersecretary of the Treasury Gardner. He is now 42 years old.

Jim married Miss Patsy Aiken Douglas, a Washington girl, in 1938. They have two children, Sally and Junior, and live in a two-story frame Colonial house at 3407 Rodman st. nw.

He gave up flying some time ago, but still likes to work in the back yard, build bookcases at home, and fix the radiator. He enjoys working his hands, after a long day working with his head.

GPO Offered Wage Proposal

An average pay raise of 11 per cent was proposed yesterday by Public Printer John J. Deviny for the 3000 skilled employes in the Government Printing Office here.

Deviny informed the negotiating committees of the various craft unions that the increases which range from 26 to 31 cents an hour were the highest he could recommend to the Joint Congressional Committee on Printing. He urged the committees to accept the offer.

The Public Printer said the increases would go into effect next Monday if the employes and the joint committee approved his proposed new wage schedule. This is the Deviny scale:

Printers, pressmen, carpenters, electricians, machinists, painters and pipefitters would be boosted from $2.12 to $2.38 an hour; offset platemakers, $2.03 to $2.29; photo-engravers, $2.37 to $2.63; bookbinders, $2.03 to $2.29, and electrotypers and stereotypers, from $2.19 to $2.50 an hour.

B & O Layoff Set Dec. 20

Baltimore, Dec. 13 (U.P.).—The Baltimore & Ohio Railroad announced today that it will start layinf. off employes throughout its system oon December 20 because of loss of business.

President Roy B. White refused to state the exact number to be let go, saying only that included will be 10 per cent of the clerical force, and 2755 in the motor power division.

The layoffs will continue at least until January 3.

White said business fell off markedly around Thanksgiving, and "the expected upturn in traffic (since) did not materialize.

Maryland Coal Mines' Part Time Hits 5000

Cumberland, Md., Dec. 13 (AP).—The earnings of approximately 5000 miners in District 16, United Mine Workers of America, have been cut in half in recent weeks due to part-time operation of coal mines, David Watkins, union representative, said today.

Watkins declared virtually no mines are operating a five-day week.

"Many of the men are getting only two and three days," the union leader asserted. "Some strip mines have closed entirely. While no exact figures are available, we believe that about 10 per cent of our men are entirely without work."

District 16 includes Allegany and Garrett Counties in Maryland and Mineral, Grant and Tucker Counties in West Virginia.

Pay Boost Supported By Truman and allowances of the President, Vice President and the Speaker.

Webb bluntly warned the committee that our Government can't remain on a sound basis "if its most important positions of leadership and responsibility must be filled by men who have private means to supplement their Government salaries or by men without private means who serve at too great a personal sacrifice."

The budget director also revealed the President would support pay raises for 2000-odd bureau chiefs and other executives, but he suggested this matter be cared for in a bill to overhaul the Classification Act. On a general pay raise for all Federal workers, he said that problem was being debated along with higher military pay, more liberal social security benefits and higher Federal pensions along with a new presidential plan to curb inflation.

Each committee member present and every major witness expressed sympathy for the District government employes who were exempted from the $330 increase upward of 850,000 other classified Government workers received in July. Senator O'Conor (D., Md.) suggested that the bill be amended to include the District workers and to make the increase for them retroactive to July 1.

During the afternoon session, employe union leaders whose members are not covered by the legislation went down the line for it in statesmanlike fashion. All of them pleaded for speedy enactment of the measure.

Among them were William C. Doherty of the AFL's letter carriers; James G. Yaden of the AFL's American Federation of Government Employes; Tom Walters of the AFL's Government Employe Council; Gertrude M. McNally of the National Federation of Federal Employes; William Armbrust of the United National Association of Postoffice Clerks, and W. L. Manning of the rural carriers.

Doherty said the King of England was paid about $1,378,000 a year. On that basis, he said, "President Truman is the most underpaid man in the history of the world."

All of the union leaders urged upward salary adjustments for the low paid as well as the top bracket officials.

The President suggested, Webb said, the following pay scales:

$25,000—Atomic Energy Commission chairman, ECA administrator, Comptroller General, Council of Economic Advisers chairman, White House officials designated by the President, budget director, National Security Resources Board chairman, Federal Security Agency administrator, Federal Reserve Board chairman, undersecretaries of all departments, the assistant to the Attorney General, United States Solicitor General, and First Assistant Postmaster General.

$20,000—Housing and Home Finance Agency administrator, Federal Works Agency administrator, Federal Reserve Board members (other than chairman), Atomic Energy Commission members (other than chairman), Public Printer, Librarian of Congress, Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service chairman, Munitions Board chairman, Research and Development Board chairman, Central Intelligence Agency director, ECA deputy administrator, Atomic Energy Commission general manager, Assistant Comptroller General, assistant director Budget Bureau, executive assistant director Veterans' Administration and Federal Security Agency assistant administrator.

$17,500—Director of Administrative Office of United States Courts, Housing Expediter, War Assets Administration administrator, Selective Service director, United States archivist, all members of the various boards and commissions, National Labor Relations Board general counsel, all assistant secretaaries of departments, all Assistant Attorneys General, Assistant United States Solicitor General, State Department Counselor, Second, Third and Fourth Asistant Postmasters General, Associate Director of the Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service, Deputy Director Central Intelligence Agency, administrator of the Philippine Alien Property Administration, general manager Tennessee Valley Authority, Chief Assistant Librarian of Congress, Deputy Public Printer, Architect of the Capitol, assistant administrator Federal Works Agency, Governor of the Territories and possessions (Alaska, Hawaii, Puerto Rico, Virgin Islands) and the Governor of the Panama Canal.

Md. Electors Vote for Dewey Amid Chaffing

son, a local man, more or less as a courtesy.

Today's electors were seeing the college in action for the first time. As Secretary of State Boone explained, "They would have to be pretty old men to have been around the last time their party won."

There was a considerable good natured joking between the two parties before the college got down to its formal "business."

Secretary Boone explained: "It doesn't make me too happy to present you with these certificates (designating them as electors). But we here in Annapolis firmly believe in the two party system, and I hope you'll go back and build up your fences—but not too strongly."

Grumbled one of the electors: "We did all right this time."

The only real hitch in the proceedings developed as the electors set about signing their names to the various memoranda. The official pen went dry.

Other than that, everything ran smoothly. The electors named their permanent chairman—Sherman Flannagan, a Westminster insurance man; their permanent vice chairman, George C. Warner, jr., Bethesda attorney, and elected J. Edgar Harvey, deputy attorney general for the State, as secretary.

Archivist Radoff pointed out that Maryland can claim some of the responsibility for the establishment of the electoral college. For the original Maryland constitution had an electoral system for choice of State senators after which the United States Constitution was partially patterned.

However, he explained, the Maryland system was so complicated that it was abandoned early in the State's history.

At any rate, the meeting adjourned sine die at 12:45 and 10 minutes later, an administrative assistant in Maryland's State Department had pasted the last "covering memoranda" to the last letter and announced, "Well, it's done."

And on January 6, the President of the Senate will open his electoral college mail and report that the candidate whom the Maryland electors voted for yesterday has lost the election.

Lords Approve Longer Service for Conscripts

London, Dec. 13 (AP).—The House of Lords approved tonight a bill to increase the term of conscripts in the armed forces from 12 months to 18. The measure already has been passed by Commons.

Va. Electors Go Legal and Pick Truman

ranged at the bottom for the electors' signatures.

"It's the new short ballot," said the Third District man, shaking his pen.

Everybody signed up, and a lull developed until the college's only coed returned. George C. Landreth of Alexandria, Eighth District elector, allowed that duck hunting last week was simply scandalous. Crocket said he'd got the limit Saturday, but things were kind of spotty. Some nice canvasbacks, though. Nothing like a canvasback that's fed on wild celery. Texture of the meat's so much better.

Miss Breckenridge returned from breaking her date, and a bystander asked if the guy was mad.

"He was furious," she said, smiling to show she didn't mean it. "Must I do something with these ballots now?"

"Just count them to see that they're all there," said Crockett. "What's the result?"

"Why, there's 22—no, there's 11 done twice—that is, I guess Mr. Truman's unanimously elected—that's all I can say."

"It is so ordered," said Crockett. "Now for the Vice President of the United States."

Miss Breckinridge counted up 11 for Barkley, and announced the fact more firmly.

"There have been 11 votes cast for the Hon. Alben W. Barkley for vice president," Crocket proclaimed.

"That is the decision of the college, and of each of the electors. It is so ordered."

It turned out that Davis was right on the ball. He tendered printed forms which required nothing but signatures. They declared in 10-point type that the electors had cast 11 votes for "Harry S. Truman, of the State of Missouri, and no other person."

It took nearly an hour to get everything signed and sealed, but shortly before 3 o'clock the last document was prepared for registered mail delivery to Washington.

Joseph N. Cridlin of the Ninth District, invited the whole crowd to lunch, and the meeting adjourned.

"I declare," said Miss Breckinridge, "This is the nicest college I ever attended."

Elaborate Inaugural Plan Hit agreed to guarantee $25,000 toward expenses, according to an announcement by Hildreth.

A spokesman said the parade would lead off with Washington police, to be followed by the grand marshal, the presidential section, the color guard, and finally eight divisions covering virtually all branches of military service, State representatives and "miscellaneous" organizations. There also will be three aerial demonstrations.

A steam calliope will be in the parade, probably in the Kentucky section, a spokesman said.

"We don't know where it will go," he added. "It won't end it. It might head it——maybe we'll suspend it from a blimp. . . ."

Leslie Biffle, secretary of the Congressional Inaugural Committee, announced that Senator Alben Barkley (D., Ky.) will take his oath of office as Vice President on the same Capitol plaza stand where President Truman will be sworn in.

Senate Democrats Plan to Organize

Senate Democrats will organize for the new Congress at a meeting December 31.

Senator Barkley of Kentucky, who made the announcement yesterday, said he hopes to remain as Democratic leader until he is sworn in as Vice President January 20.

The conference is expected to name Senator Lucas of Illinois as Democratic leader to succeed Barkley after the inauguration. Senator Myers of Pennsylvania is slated for assistant leader.

The Democrats also will choose a Senate presiding officer to succeed Senator Vandenberg (R., Mich.) in that post. Seators McKellar of Tennessee and Tydings of Maryland may be candidates.

Grand Jury Views 'Pumpkin Films'

New York, Dec. 13 (AP).—A member of the House Committee on Un-American Activities gave the spy-probing grand jury here a 75-minute look at Whittaker Chambers' "Pumpkin Films" today. He then agreed to let the jury see them again whenever it pleases.

Representative Richard Nixon (R., Calif.), who brought the microfilms here, also agreed to let the FBI examine them in Washington Tuesday. The committee and the Justice Department have been at odds over conduct of their twin investigations.

The agreement was disclosed in a joint announcement by Nixon and Federal District Attorney John F. X. McGohey.

Earlier, Nixon told newsmen that under rules of the House he could not surrender House property—such as the films—without a court order.

Just before the grand jury adjourned for the day, however, Nixon, McGohey and two other Justice Department representatives went to the chambers of Federal Judge John W. Clancy. Then they went to the office of Thomas J. Donegan, special Assistant United States Attorney General in charge of the grand jury-espionage probe. Subsequently the statement was issued.

The films contain pictues of documents allegedly stolen from State Department files for Russian agents. They have been in the hands of the House committee since Chambers produced them from a hollowed-out pumpkin on his Westminster, Md., farm 10 days ago.

The grand jury had repeatedly asked for a look at the films, which were marked as evidence today. Nixon said he was taking them back to Washington tonight and would not bring them here again unless asked.

Commenting on the joint announcement, Nixon described the compromise as "one which keeps the documents in the custody of the House and yet makes them available ot the grand jury for its purposes as well."

He said he thought the FBI would try to bring out more clearly some of the images on the films, which had been damaged somewhat in storage.

New Witness Heard

The jury, before Nixon's appearance, heard the testimony of a new witness today. She was Eleanor Nelson, identified only as a former Government employe in Washington.

Attired in a brown fur coat and a black hat, the grey-haired woman remained in the jury room for 20 minutes. She avoided reporters as she left the hearing. Justice Department spokesmen refused to disclose her connection with the investigation.

Others who appeared to testify were William Ward Pigman, former Government chemist; his brother, George, and Chambers, who resigned recently as a senior editor of Time Magazine.

William Pigman and Julian Wadleigh, ex-State Department economist, along with Hiss, have been accused by Chambers of slipping him secret documents for transmission to Soviet agents. The two men also appeared before the grand jury last week.

Pigman denied Chambers' charge. Wadleigh, a witness before a House committee hearing last week, refused to testify about the spy ring accusations on the ground it might tend to incriminate him.

George Pigman's role in the investigation was not disclosed.

Sayre Is Invited to Testify

get is it has a considerable about of credibility."

He said the committee has been in touch with "the lie detector people" and if it is decided to go through with the tests it will be with "the best lie detector apparatus and authorities the country can afford."

He said those consenting to take the test would be asked to take it quietly in closed session without any fanfare, but that afterward the results would be made public.

Mundt, meanwhile, confirmed that the committee has in its possession several typewriten sheets, regarded as important clews, but did not say whether it has yet been determined that the same machine used to copy some of the stolen documents also typed the samples. Since every typewriter has its own characteristics the committee is not only trying to find the machine and its possessor, but any letters or other matter typed on it.

Lupe, meanwhile, began to form in what promises to be one of the sharpest fights of the new Congress over whether (1) to abolish the Un-American Activities Committee outright as President Truman may recommend, or (2) to liberalize its rules of procedure as suggested by Representative Chet Holifield (D., Calif.).

Speaker Joseph W. Martin, jr. (R., Mass.), yesterday cast his lot with the committee, predicting it will be continued "by an overwhelming vote."

Martin said in a statement that the people "want a live, intelligent committee which will fearlessly, honestly and fairly protect Americanism."

"They are tired of hush-hush and are demanding the light be turned on those who have been subservient to foreign powers," said Martin's statement. "That is why nothing less than complete publicity will be tolerated regarding the documents found in Chambers' pumpkin. It is hard for the people to believe that 'secrets' which have been known to foreign diplomats and hundreds of Americans for ten years can be against the National interest, if now given to the public . . ."

Martin said any committee like the Un-American Activities Committee makes "strong enemies—they can be depended upon to fight to abolish the committee, but I cannot believe a movement to discontinue the committee would get very far."

Representative F. Edward Hebert (La.), a Democratic member of the committee, said that like Martin he believes the committee will be continued, but like Holifield, he believes "new rules of fair play" should be substituted for present procedures.

"As it is, a denial never quite catches up with the accusation," said Hebert.

Holifield's proposals, among other things requiring a majority vote to subpena witnesses or documents, permitting witnesses to be advised by counsel, and giving persons who feel they have been injured by testimony the right to answer charges orally or in writing, to cross-examine witnesses, and to offer as many as four witnesses in their own behalf, are expected to be offered when the rules for the new session are proposed at the start of the new Congress.

Indications are that a motion to abolish the committee will be offered at the outset, and if this fails, Holifield's liberalization of the committee's rules will be proposed either by himself or by someone of leadership rank.

CAB Tightens Controls On 'Irregular' Carriers

The Civil Aeronautics Board acted to tighten control over "irregular" air carriers—operators of transport planes who do not hold certificates for scheduled service as common carriers, by setting forth specific examples of the types of operation which fail to meet "irregular" standards.

It also issued a proposed rule change aimed at revoking the general exemption granted such air carriers and substituting special exemption to be granted individually.

The board's action and proposal would tend generally to restrict invasion of the airline passenger market by carriers not having specific authority to engage in scheduled operations.

Holiday Turkey Challenges 'the Champ'

STEADY THERE!—President Truman ran into some opposition when he inspected two gift turkeys for his Christmas dinner yesterday. One spread its wings in approved turkey fighting stance and put a menacing claw on the President's arm. The birds were presented to Mr. Truman by the Poultry and Egg National Board and the National Turkey Federation

President Truman got some advance Christmas presents yesterday—including 10 pounds of butter and a humidor of cigars (he does not smoke) from the Republican town of Truman, Minn.

Mr. Truman also received two Christmas turkeys from Grayton McCulley of Maple Plain, Minn., and C. F. Schmidt of New York, representing the Poultry and Egg National Board and a group of turkey growers. McCulley heads the National Turkey Federation.

One of the birds was a 40-pound bronze turkey, the other a 14-pound "apartment type" developed by the Agriculture Department.

In presenting the larger turkey, McCulley said, "Mr. President, here is one tom that got into the White House." The President chuckled over McCulley's pun on the election.

Mr. Truman said he will take both turkeys home to Independence, Mo. He said he has about 25 relatives who require a lot of turkey for Christmas dinner.

The butter and cigars were presented to Mr. Truman by Don Peterson, editor of the Truman, Minn., Tribune and a group of "darn good Republicans."

They called on the President to invite him to attend the golden jubilee which their town of 1300 will hold next September. The Chief Executive took the invitation under advisement.

The town of Truman gave the President 241 votes in the presidential election compared with 267 for Dewey.

Clark Won't Press Chambers Perjury Angle

By Edward T. Folliard
Post Reporter

Attorney General Tom Clark hopes that action will be delayed on the question of whether Whittaker Chambers is quilty of perjury.

His over-all purpose, it was learned yesterday, is to find out who stole State Department documents for the benefit of a Communist spy ring.

The Attorney General feels that the question of whether Chambers or others should be indicted for perjury could be taken up afterward.

Rep. Nixon's Charge

Representative Richard M. Nixon (R., Calif.), a member of the House Committee on Un-American Activities, charged in effect last week that the Department of Justice was attempting to silence the committee by having a New York grand jury indict Chambers on a perjury count.

He had in mind the fact that Chambers, until recently, always had denied that he possessed any documents to back up his story about Alger Hiss and other Government officials turning over information to Communist espionage agents.

Representative Nixon said the indications were that Chambers, an avowed former Communist, would be indicted for perjury as a result of his voluntary action in bringing to light copies of State Department documents which he claimed were turned over to him by Hiss.

Not Clark's Intent

If this happened, Nixon said, it would "destroy" the committee's last chance "to proceed against others . . . because their star witness would be an indicted perjurer."

Attorney General Clark, it was learned authoritatively, has no intention of taking any steps that would "destroy" the chance of punishing those who filched the State Department papers.

Alongside of that most important question, he regards the perjury angle as a sideshow.

The New York grand jury, it was pointed out yesterday, is an independent body that includes some strong-minded men. If it chose, it could ignore the Attorney General's wishes in the matter.

Wadleigh Dreaded Fascism, Wife Asserts

tee in connection with charges by Whittaker Chambers, self-described former Communist courier. Chambers claimed Wadleigh was one of the three sources of pilfered Government documents. Wadleigh, however, did flatly deny he was ever a Communist.

In New York, where Wadleigh has been called before the Federal grand jury investigating criminal aspects of the spy charges, reporters have noticed a "distinct change" in the 44-year-old economist's attitude. Recently his attitude to reporters has become friendly, though not informative whereas he had been "surly," observers remarked.

Meanwhile, Mrs. Wadleigh said she understood her husband would release a statement tomorrow. She observed he said he was impressed by the "decency" of the Justice Department and the grand jury as opposed to the congressional spy investigators who, he found, were "strictly hunting headlines."

Slight, with bushy hair that always has an uncombed look, Wadleigh was described by former associates as a brilliant economic theorist who lived in an intellectual cocoon.

The concensus of more than a dozen former associates and friends was that Wadleigh was "the last man you would ever expect to do anything practical."

His strength lay in his keen, analytical powers—his ability to find flaws in any economic thinking, former associates said. His favorite pastime was pointing out the fallacies in the theories of all economic schools. Friends distinctly recall hearing him debunk Marxian economic theories.

"If he really got involved in a Communist ring," one official stated, "it would have been because of an impractical conception of how to make it a better world."

Conceivably, a man such as Wadleigh might have felt a compelling call to act in the interests of furthering world peace, in the years of 1937-1938, when Russia still appeared eager for collective security pacts and stood forth as a bulwark against fascism, the official said.

Backed Strong Foreign Policy

In this connection, the official recalled, Wadleigh on occasion had expressed great disappointment with British and French rejection of Russia's offer to guarantee the integrity of Czechoslovakia prior to the Munich Pact. Moreover, Wadleigh had expressed belief in the need for a stronger American policy to bolster anti-Fascist forces in Europe.

Several former colleagues stressed that Wadleigh was not a man whose reactions ever appeared emotional.

"Even in discussing the barbarisms of Nazi Germany, one official noted, "he would be intellectual in his approach, sometimes annoyingly so."

The son of an Episcopal minister, he was described as a man with a strong conscience, much influenced by the Christian ethics of the New Testament, although not a churchgoer.

Impracticality Cited

Numerous instances were cited to illustrate his impracticality. In the coldest weather he would appear without a coat and then, in reply to questions, remark that he had simply forgotten to wear one when he left home.

He's been building a log cabin home for eight years. He and his wife and three children live in the still incomplete dwelling on a wood and thicket-surrounded plot near Vienna, Va.

Against the advice of friends, he transferred to UNRRA when there were indications the international organization would soon fold. He told friends he would like to help distribute food to needy Europe and "you must not always look at your own personal interests."

Decides to Be Writer

Then, about two years ago, although he had five mouths to feed, he quit working to pursue a whim to be a writer. For about nine months he was unemployed, trying to write short stories and articles, none of which he ever sold, his wife confirmed.

A man who had no use for frivolity or small talk, Wadleigh, on the job, appeared to colleagues as somewhat aloof and intellectually superior, reserved and remote.

"But after you got past the barriers," one friend, said "you couldn't help but like him somewhat, though you couldn't always understand so complex a person."

High strung and nervous, he had a habit of curling a rubber band in his hands, his fingers working constantly over it—when he wasn't running his hand through his hair. hair.

Wadleigh was born in Greenfield, Mass., in 1904 and went abroad with his parents as a child. He attended English prep schools where he was ill-received as a foreigner and later in life occasionally indicated an anti-English bias, friends said.

He studied Latin and Greek at Oxford University "to satisfy his parents," his wife said. He switched his academic focus to economics, his wife said, because "economics cuts across the pains of everyone and everything in this life today," whereas he found Latin and Greek "dead matter."

Studied in Europe

Wadleigh received an M.A. degree at Oxford, then went on to study at the London School of Economics, the University of Kiel in Germany. Later he studied economics at the University of Chicago under Jacob Viner, now at Princeton University, a distinguished economist who is a profound advocate of a freely competitive economy.

He entered Government service in 1930 as an economist with the Federal Farm Board. Later he went to the Department of Agriculture and the Agriculture Adjustment Administration.

From 1936 to 1943 Wadleigh worked for the State Department as a reciprocal trade economist. In 1937 and 1938 he worked in the trade agreements division. At that time Alger Hiss was an assistant to Francis Sayre, Assistant Secretary of State, whose assignment included trade problems.

Wadleigh served as assistant chief of the division of special research from 1939 to 1942.

In 1943 Wadleigh, who speaks Italian fluently and German and French slightly, was sent to Italy as an economic assistant to the Allied military government.

Subsequently he worked for UNRRA and in May of this year he became economic assistant to the food and agriculture division of the Italian Technical Delegation to the United States. He resigned the last post December 7, after he was questioned by the FBI.

D. C. Police Lashed By Supreme Court

(See Related Story on Page 1)

Washington police yesterday were given one of the most severe tongue-lashings ever administered by the Supreme Court on the subject of police powers.

In berating the police for failing to obtain a search warrant and forcing their way into a rooming house to seek gambling evidence, the Supreme Court majority declared they engaged in a "shocking" and "reckless" abuse of power.

The high court's remarks came in their 6-to-3 vote reversing gambling convictions in a case dating back to June 22, 1946, involving Earl Hunter McDonald, 40, and Joseph F. Washington, 52.

Justice Douglas delivered the majority opinion in which Justices Murphy, Jackson and Frankfurter concurred in full. Justice Black said he concurred "in the result," while Justice Rutledge said he concurred in the result and in the opinion as it related to McDonald, but differed on a legal point concerning Washington, although he said the evidence was also inadmissible regarding the latter.

Three Justices Hold Arrest Valid

Chief Justice Vinson and Justices Burton and Reed flatly differed with the majority, holding the arrest of McDonald and Washington to be valid.

The majority opinion recounted how police for two months watched McDonald enter and leave a rooming house at 1603 3d st. nw.

On the day of arrest, without a search or arrest warrant, three officers were outside and one "thought that he heard an adding machine," used in numbers operations.

One opened a window into the landlady's room, climbing through, "identified himself to her and admitted the other officers to the house," the opinion recounted.

Officer Peeped Through Transom

On the second floor, one officer stood on a chair, peeped through a transom, saw McDonald and Washington "as well as numbers slips, money piled on the table and adding machines," and yelled to McDonald to open the door, which he did.

The Fourth Amendment's "guarantee of protection against unreasonable searches and seizures," declared the majority in condemning this action, "extends to the innocent and guilty alike. It marks the right of privacy as one of the unique values of our civilization . . ."

"And the law provides as a sanction against the flouting of this constitutional safeguard the suppression of evidence secured as a result of the violation, when it is tendered in a Federal court."

Illegal Entry Held Basic

The majority opinion noted that the prosecution defended the action by reasoning that the officers had trespassed on the landlady's rights of privacy, not McDonald's, in gaining entry through her room, and that as far as McDonald was concerned:

"Looking over the transom was not a search, for the eye cannot commit the trespass condemned by the Fourth Amendment."

But the majority refused to even discuss the transom peeking itself, holding the illegal entry basic. "This is not a case," they said, "where the officers, passing by on the street, hear a shot and a cry for help and demand entrance in the name of the law. . . .

"Where, as here, officers are not responding to an emergency, there must be compelling reasons to justify the absence of a search warrant . . . We cannot allow the constitutional barrier that protects the privacy of the individual to be hurdled so easily . . .

"Police . . . Cannot Be Trusted"

". . . the Fourth Amendment has interposed a magistrate between the citizen and the police. This was done not to shield criminals nor to make the home a safe haven for illegal activities. It was done so that an objective mind might weigh the need to invade that privacy in order to enforce the law . . .

". . . Power is a heady thing; and history shows that the police acting on their own cannot be trusted."

Justice Jackson wrote an additional opinion in which Frankfurter also concurred, which Jackson said "may be helpful to lower courts and to the police themselves to state what appears to some of us as the reason this search is bad."

He said:

"Had the police been admitted as guests of another tenant or had the approaches been thrown open by an obliging landlady or doorman, they would have been legally in the hallways. Like any other stranger, they could then spy or eavesdrop on others without being trespassers."

But in this case, he said, "Here the police gained access to their peeking post by means that were not merely unauthorized but by means that were forbidden by law and denounced as criminal."

Calls Forced Entry 'Shocking'

Said Justice Jackson:

"Even if one were to conclude that urgent circumstances might justify a forced entry without a warrant, no such emergency was present in this case. This method of law enforcement displays a shocking lack of all sense of proportion."

"While the enterprise of parting fools from their money by the numbers lottery is one that ought to be suppressed, I do not think its suppression is more importtant to society than the security of the people against unreasonable searches and seizures."

In the minority opinion, Chief Justice Vinson and Justices Burton and Reed stated:

"At the time of the raid, there were sufficient grounds to justify the police in suspecting that the unlawful lottery, which later proved to be in operation, was in progress within the building which had been under surveillance.

Termed Difficult Police Job

"A 'numbers game,' such as was there conducted, is a form of lottery generally regarded as detrimental to the communities where it flourishes. It is highly profitable to its principals at the expense of its players. Yet it is so simple in operation that its headquarters are readily movable.

"Accordingly, it requires substantial police efforts to stop such unlawful operations at their source.

"It is difficult to locate the principals and it is still more difficult to secure proof sufficient to convict them unless they are arrested in the midst of the comparatively brief periodical sessions when the essential computations for the operation of the lottery is being made. . . .

The police were justified in their entry under such circumstances, said the minority, and: "The actual observance by the police of the commission of the suspected crime thereupon justified their immeimmediate arrest of those engaged in it without securing a warrant for such arrest."

Neither Man Served Time

"It is generally not a violation of any constitutional privilege of the accused for a police officer to arrest such accused without a warrant of arrest if the arrest is made at the very moment when the accused is engaged in a violation of law in the presence of the officer."

"There was no search," they declared, for the articles were "in plain sight" and the suspects had "no right to object to the presence of officers in the hall of the rooming house."

McDonald had been sentenced to 6 to 18 months, and Washington to 60 days, but both were out on bond and had not served any jail time in this case. The Court of Appeals had upheld their conviction by a 2-to-1 vote. They will be freed when orders reach the lower courts.

Congress May Fix Detention Limit

During oral arguments on the Upshaw case last month, Justice Frankfurter declared:

"I suggest that the Justice Department ask Congress to decide definitely how long police can keep a person for questioning in order to complete their investigation."

Joel D. Blackwell, court-appointed attorney who directed Upshaw's successful appeal, said last night that he is contemplating urging the Attorney General and the Senate and House Judicial Committees to spell out an appropriate time limit in legislation.

Upshaw Gets News In D. C. Workhouse

Andrew Upshaw received the news yesterday at the District Workhouse that the Supreme Court had reversed his grand larceny conviction.

He has been out on personal bond on that charge since June, pending high court action. But on December 6, he was sentenced to $10 fine or 10 days at the District Workhouse at Occoquan, Va., on an intoxication charge.

Upshaw's appeal to the Supreme Court on the larceny conviction was filed as a pauper's claim.

Police Adjust Parking Ticket Of Man Seized With Amnesia

A traffic ticket for parking an auto over 18 hours on a heavily traveled street was changed to a warning last week for a motorist, after relatives explained he had suffered an attack of amnesia.

He was one of 106 motorists for whom traffic tickets were "fixed," police reported yesterday.

The adjustment was granted when George W. Ward of 3700 Albermarle st. nw., told police his nephew, Ralph Cambell, 37, a World War II veteran, of 1502 Columbia rd. nw., parked his car in front of his home, suffered an attack of amnesia and was found several days later in Delaware. Campbell is now at Mount Alto Hospital.

Tickets were cancelled for the following motorists because of diplomatic immunity: Jacques Arnould, French Embassy, failing to park to the curb; Jean P. Galichier, French Embassy, parked in alley; M. G. E. Kinany, Egyptian Embassy, parked in a "no parking from 4 to 6 p.m." zone; Rene Lehmann, French Embassy, parked in a "no parking from 8 a.m. to 6 p.m." zone; Jacques Parat, French Embassy, obstructing a crosswalk; Annie L. Winckle, 1620 P st. nw., parked less than 40 feet from an intersection; Ali Fahim, Egyptian Embassy, parked overtime; Hugo N. Mogro, Embassy of Bolivia, parked in bus stop and parked in a "no parking from 4 to 6 p.m." zone.

A ticket for parking in a "no parking from 4 to 6:30 p.m." zone was changed to a warning for Wolfgang Seutter Von Loetzen, of the Austrian Legation, because of diplomatic courtesy.

Second D. C. Case in 4 Years Provides Basis For Defining Police Powers on Confessions

(See Related Story on Page 1)

For the second time in four years, a District Court case yesterday served as the basis for a major Supreme Court decision defining police power in obtaining confessions from suspects.

Whether a confession obtained by police is given to them "voluntarily" or "involuntarily," the majority said in yesterday's decision, it is still illegal if obtained as the result of undue detention.

In the famous McNabb case, in 1943, in which three moonshiners were convicted of murdering a tax agent during a raid on a still in Tennessee, the high court threw out confessions obtained through third-degree methods and held:

"An officer making an arrest . . . shall without unnecessary delay take the person arrested before the nearest available" committing magistrate.

A year later, in the Mitchell case, involving James P. Mitchell, Washington "society burglar," the high court ruled that although Mitchell was held eight days without arraignment his confessions were admissible because, yesterday's decision recalled:

". . . Although the defendant was illegally held eight days, the court accepted the record as showing that Mitchell promptly and spontaneously admitted his guilt within a few minutes after his arrival at the police station.

"Mitchell's confessions, therefore, were found to have been made before any illegal detention had occurred."

Arrested in October, 1942, Mitchell was held the eight days "without protest" police said at the time, and aided in clearing up 30 housebreakings. Following the Supreme Court decision, he was given a 2½ to 7½-year sentence.

In the case decided yesterday, Andrew Upshaw, 34, of 1533 8th st. nw., was charged with stealing a $135 watch belonging to the wife of Police Inspector Robert C. Pearce, on May 1, 1947. While he was held, said police, he confessed selling the watch for $5 and a bottle of whisky.

According to court records, Upshaw was arrested at 2 a. m. Friday, June 6 and taken to the Tenth Police Precinct. He was questioned repeatedly, confessed at 9 a. m. June 7, and signed a statement at 2 p. m. June 7.

The opinion states he was taken to court on Monday, June 9, nearly 31 hours after arrest, and, "The officers testified that they had not had him committed sooner because they did not have a sufficient case against him to cause the Police Court to hold him and because they wanted to continue their investigation."

Upshaw was convicted on strength of the confession, and sentenced to 16 months to 4 years in prison. In the United States Court of Appeals here the United States Attorney's office cited the McNabb case as a precedent for establishing that office had erred in using the confession as evidence.

The Court of Appeals strongly rebuked the police for not taking Upshaw before a committing magistrate on June 6, but by a 2 to 1 vote said "however blame worthy" police were on that, there was no evidence that Upshaw's detention was "aggravated" by continous questioning, and "we discern no reason for disturbing the appellant's conviction because of it."

In reversing that decision, Justice Black delivered the Supreme Court majority opinion, in which Justices Murphy, Douglas, Rutledge and Frankfurter concurred.

Said Justice Black:

"The Court of Appeals . . . read the McNabb case . . . as holding that "a confession voluntarily given is admissible in evidence' while conversely 'a confession involuntarily made is inadmissible.' That court thought the McNabb case did no more than extend the meaning of 'involuntary' confessions to exclude psychological coercion as well as that brought about by physical brutality . . ."

"We hold," said Justice Black, "that this case falls squarely within the McNabb ruling and is not taken out of it by what was decided in the Mitchell case. In the McNabb case we held that the plain purpose of the requirement that prisoners should promptly be taken before committing magistrates was to check resorts by officers to 'secret interrogation of persons accused of crime.'

". . . In the McNabb case there were confessions 'induced by illegal detention' . . . a fact which this court found did not exist in the Mitchell case . . .

"The Mitchell case . . . however, reffirms the McNabb rule that a confession is inadmissible if made during illegal detention due to failure promptly to carry a prisoner before a committing magistrate, whether or not the 'confession is the result of torture, physical or psychological . . .'

"In this case we are left in no doubt as to why this petition was not brought promptly before a committing magistrate. . . ."

"The argument was made to the trial court," said Justice Black, "that this method of arresting, holding, and questioning people on mere suspicion was in accordance with the 'usual procedure of questioning a suspect . . .' However usual this practice, it is in violation of law, and confessions thus obtained are inadmissible under the McNabb rule."

The majority did not specifically discuss what is "unnecessary delay" in arraignment.

In the dissent, Justice Reed who had dissented in the McNabb case, said:

"The judicial approach to the problem . . . must be in a spirit of cooperation with the police officials in the administration of justice."

He said the McNabb decision in "departure . . . from well-established methods for protection against coercion has been condemned by the House of Representatives and not acted upon by the Senate."

Officers charged with enforcement of the criminal law have objected to it, he said, and "State courts under similar laws and conditions have refused to follow the McNabb example."

"Instead of an extension of the McNabb rule, I feel that it should be left, as I think it originally was, a rule that barred a confession extracted under psychological pressure of the degree used in the McNabb case.

"Such condemnation of even the restricted McNabb rule by those immediately responsible for the enactment and administration of our criminal laws should make this court, so far removed from the actualities of crime prevention, hesitate long before pushing farther by judicial legislation its conception of the proprieties in criminal investigation.

"It takes this step in the belief that thereby it strengthens criminal administration by protecting a prisoner. A prisoner should have protection but it is well to remember that law and order is an essential prerequisite to the protection of the security of all. Today's decision puts another weapon in the hand of the criminal world.

"If there is a prevalent abuse of the right to question prisoners, the sounder remedy lies in police discipline, in statutory punishment of offending officials, in vigorous judicial protection against unconstitutional pressures for confessions, and in legislative enactments for inquiries into circumstances surrounding crimes by methods that protect both the public and suspects—for example, an inquiry before a magistrate with sealed evidence."

instruments of the crime which then were in plain sight. There was no search. There is, therefore, no issue as to the need for a search warrant."

Both the majority opinion and dissent in this case discussed the relationship of numbers gambling, which Jackson termed " a shabby swindle" but not immediately endangering "life or limb" in that case. The dissent, in condoning the arrest, referred to the difficulty of seizing evidence in such cases.

Held for 30 Hours

In the illegal detention case, Andrew Upshaw was arrested on a Friday at 2 a. m., according to evidence, but instead of being taken into court on Saturday, was held for 30 hours for questioning and allegedly confessed to stealing a $135 watch from the home of Inspector Robert C. Pearce.

Although it upheld the conviction of Upshaw, sentenced to 16 months to 4 years in prison, the United States Court of Appeals here severely rebuked police and the Government prosecutor for not taking Upshaw to court until the Monday following his arrest.

Even though there was no finding that Upshaw was "coerced" into making a confession, said the Supreme Court majority in the 5-to-4 decision, persons arrested must be taken before a committing magistrate "without unnecessary delay" or such a confession is void.

"However usual this practice ('of arresting, holding and questioning people on mere suspicion'), it is in violation of law," said the majority.

Strongly dissenting, Justice Reed, in a 23-page opinion in which Chief Justice Vinson, and Justices Jackson and Burton concurred, declared:

"Today's decision puts another weapon in the hand of the criminal world."

Justice Reed said the majority opinion greatly extends nonadmissibility of confessions despite the fact that "those most concerned with a proper administration of the criminal law are against any extension."

The majority, he says, fails "to distinguish between necessary and unnecessary delay in commitment." He said "the prevention and punishment of crime is a difficult and dangerous task," while the court is "so far removed from the actualities of crime prevention."

In the third case, Elmer Uveges in 1938, at the age of 17, was sentenced to 20 to 40 years when he plead guilty to burglary charges. His attorneys argued in their appeal that the youth was not permitted to communicate with relatives for two weeks after his arrest, was never given a lawyer, and the charges were not fully explained to him.

Frankfurter Voices Dissent

Justice Reed said for the majority which reversed the Pennsylvania Supreme Court's denial of a habeas corpus hearing for the youth, "The record shows no attempt on the part of the court to make him understand the consequences of his plea.

Justice Frankfurter, in a dissent in which Justices Jackson and Burton concurred, said the high court should not have acted in the case, because information came before it which the Pennsylvania court did not hear.

Said Frankfurter for the minority:

"The circumstances under which this court is reversing the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania show such disregard for the distribution of judicial power between this court and the highest courts of the States, that I am constrained to dissent."

Urging that the claim should be dismissed and taken up before the Pennsylvania court instead, he said, "After all, this is the Nation's ultimate judicial tribunal, not a super-legal-aid bureau . . ."

Court Upholds Kamp Verdict

The contempt of Congress conviction of Joseph P. Kamp, executive director of the Constitutional Educational League, Inc., was affirmed yesterday by the United States Court of Appeals.

In upholding the conviction, resulting in a four-month jail sentence and a $100 fine, the appeals court ruled as legal the subpena methods used by the Special Committee to Investigate Campaign Expenditures for the House of Representatives in 1944. Kamp is on bond pending appeal.

Kamp, in his District Court trial, was charged with refusing to produce papers showing contributors to his organization. He also charged that the congressional subpena for the papers was directed not at him but at the sergeant at arms. Therefore, he said, he could not be convicted for the offense.

The appeals court said, of the wording of the subpena:

"In our day it is the idea conveyed that counts. There is no suggestion that appellant (Kamp) did not know a command to him was intended, or that he was prejudiced by its not being precisely expressed."

Transamerica Again Seeks to Bar Case

By The Associated Press

Transamerica Corp. threatened yesterday to go to court again unless the Federal Reserve Board drops its credit monopoly charges or clarifies its complaint.

Samuel B. Stewart, jr., counsel for the Nation's biggest bank-holding company, told the board that its complaint accusing Transamerica of violating the 34-year-old Clayton Anti-Trust Act does not set forth any specific violation.

If an "adequate statement of fact and law" is not forthcoming, he said, he will appeal "in the proper court at the proper time" to prevent the board from conducting an "unfair hearing."

Federal District Court here recently denied a Transamerica demand that the court order the board to clarify its charges or drop the proceeding. The District Court held that the Circuit Court of Appeals is the proper reviewing body under the Clayton Act.

Stewart made his statements during arguments before five of the seven board members on his demands that the board drop the case.

He said: (1) The board has no authority to try Transamerica because it is an investment company, not a bank; (2) the proceeding is unconstitutional because the company has no opportunity to subpena defense witnesses; (3) the trial should be conducted in California, if held at all, and (4) the complaint itself does not show violation of the antitrust laws.

J. Leonard Townsend, counsel for the Federal Reserve Board, argued that Transamerica's stock ownership in some 600 banks, including the huge Bank of America chain, puts the case within the board's jurisdiction.

He said Transamerica now controls 40 to 50 per cent of all banking offices in California, Arizona, Nevada, Oregon and Washington, and in taking over independent banks has "robbed communities of any semblance of competition in the banking business."

Stewart asserted that the board's antitrust proceeding was inspired by the "so-called independent bankers" to protect Transamerica's competitors from strong competition.

He renewed his request that the board disqualify Board Members Marriner S. Eccles and Lawrence Clayton from any participation in the case because of "bias and prejudice."

He said Eccles, former board chairman, has "for six years sought every means to choke off the development of Transamerica."

Stewart said Clayton has a 21-year "record of loyalty" to Eccles, and tried unsuccessfully to get a job with a bank in which Transamerica has an interest.

Eccles has announced that he is disqualifying himself so he can be a witness.

Clark Backs Bill to Check Asset Mergers

Attorney General Tom Clark yesterday indorsed legislation to prohibit industrial corporations from creating monopolies by merging their assets with those of other concerns.

He said in a copyright interview published by the U. S. News & World Report, weekly newsmagazine, that the proposal is the only "substantial" change in anti-trust laws needed at this time.

The bill would extend the Clayton Anti-Trust Act to outlaw monopolies created by the purchase of assets as well as of stocks. Introduced by Rep. Estes Kefauver (D., Tenn.) who was elected to the Senate last November, the measure died in the House Rules Committee in the 80th Congress.

Clark said the Administration will "let Congress decide" whether anti-trust laws should be amended to clear up the confusion arising from a Government ruling, upheld by the Supreme Court, that the cement industry's basing-point price system is illegal.

"There are those who think that, from a public standpoint, it would be better to have the basing-point system," he said. "I have had several callers who have been very violently opposed to abandonment of the system. On the other hand, I've had some people come in who possibly are a little closer to production, and they think it's fine.

"I think it is a matter for Congress to decide."

Clark said he saw no need for increasing the maximum penalties for anti-trust law violations—a $5000 fine, a year's imprisonment, or both. But he felt if a prison sentence were invoked, it would "do more to act as a deterrent" in future violations.

"We have found in the past," he said, "that in paying fines, companies and associations have drawn by lot, more or less, as to who would pay the fines."

Three Men Burned In Ky. Mine Blast

Williamson, W. Va., Dec. 13 (AP). Three men were burned and possibly two others are missing in an explosion tonight at the Goody (Ky.) mine of the Pond Creek Colleries Co.

A company official, P. J. Wynns, described the accident as a "small mile explosion."

B & A Is Ordered To Renew Negotiations

Baltimore, Dec. 13 (AP)—Maryland's Public Service Commission today directed the Baltimore & Annapolis Railroad to renew efforts to settle the strike that shut it down last Wednesday. It gave the company until Tuesday morning to reply.

The issue is wages.

Los Alamos Cost $14 Million Last Year, Manager Tells

Los Alamos, N. Mex., Dec. 13 (AP). A Congressional subcommittee was told today it cost 14 million dollars last year to operate the Atomic Energy Commission's community of Los Alamos.

The community has about 9000 population.

But Carroll L. Tyler, Los Alamos project manager, said the bill for this fiscal year will be about 10 million dollars and he hopes to have it down by the next year to seven million dollars.

Tyler gave his testimony to a subcommittee on executive expenditures headed by Representative Melvin C. Snyder (R., W. Va.). The group is conducting hearing into complaints of extravagance at Los Alamos, site of an atomic weapons project.

Tyler, who took over as manager in July, 1947, said he became concerned about "excessive costs of this operation" in September and has been working to cut down ever since.

Considerable testimony was devoted to number of personnel employed by the Zia Corp., which operates the community. Representative Chenoweth (R., Colo.) commented there appears "an urgent need to reduce employes here."

The third member of the subcommittee is Representative Mansco (D., Ala.). Representative Holifield (D., Calif.) a member of the Joint Committee on Atomic Energy, is here as an observer.

Control Extension Battled in Farm Bureau Conclave

Atlantic City, N. J., Dec. 14 (AP).—The American Farm Bureau Federation Convention faced a bitter fight today on the question of extending Government controls to the production and sales of all farm products.

Authority for such controls is limited now to the so-called basic crops—wheat, corn, cotton, tobacco, peanuts and rice.

Delegates from areas producing fruits, vegetables,, tree nuts and many other minor crops are supporting a proposal advocating legislation which would extend acreage allotments, marketing quotas and marketing agreements to all farm commodities.

The convention also was confronted with a sharp battle over the issue of whether Government price supports should be kept at high wartime levels, or be allowed to go down next year in keeping with a long-range farm law passed by the Republican-controlled 80th Congress.

Both issues are not likely to be settled until Thursday, the last day of the bureau's thirtieth annual convention.

President Allan B. Kline has indicated that he would resign if the convention voted to advocate broadening of Government controls.

The fight for extending controls to all products was being led by President Herbert W. Voorhees, Trenton, of the New Jersey Farm Bureau.

Likewise, President H. L. Wingate Macon of the Georgia Farm Bureau, spearheaded a South-wide drive to get the convention to go on record for high price supports. He had active aid from delegates from Alabama, Mississippi, North Carolina, South Carolina, Tennessee, Louisiana, Texas and Oklahoma.

Kline said extension of production and marketing controls to all crops would require the creation of a "vast army" of Government officials. Furthermore, he said, it would lead to "complete regimentation" of all agriculture.

Convention support of Wingate on high price supports would involve a reversal in previous Farm Bureau policy.

Its 1947 convention went on record for a system of flexible price supports. Its officials indorsed the GOP law providing for supports ranging between 60 per cent and 90 per cent of parity.

Supports would vary with the size of crop supplies. The larger the supply, the lower would be supports, and vice versa. The idea of the system is to prevent surpluses on the one hand and shortages on the other.

Present supports are 90 per cent of parity for basic crops.

(Parity is a legal standard for equally to farmers and consumers.)

Strong support for the flexible system was being given delegates from Northern and Midwestern States.

Those favoring permanent 90-percent parity supports agree that it would be necessary in most years to have production and marketing controls to prevent costly surpluses.

Supporters of the flexible system contend it would automatically guide production and make controls unnecessary. Opposition to controls have always been strongest in Northern and Midwestern farm areas.

Home Sales Down, Buyers' Market Seen

Chicago, Dec. 13 (U.P.) — New home construction and sales are falling off in many cities throughout the Nation, especially in the higher price brackets, and some experts see a transition to a buyers' market, a survey showed today.

The hardest hit are homes costing above $10,000, but the market has slumped in some cities even on lower-priced homes.

Thousands of high-priced homes were reported standing idle for lack of buyers and price-cutting has begun in some cities as a remedy.

In general, credit restrictions and the high cost of living essentials were blamed for the downward trend.

Cities surveyed included Seattle, Phoenix, Sacramento, Raleigh, Richmond, Norfolk, Columbus, San Diego, Detroit, Buffalo, Denver, Kansas City, Pittsburgh, Hartford, San Francisco, Washington, Los Angeles, Philadelphia, Cleveland, Minneapolis, Omaha, Indianapolis, Des Moines, St. Louis, Milwaukee and Oklahoma City.

The majority reported declines in new construction or sales, or both—overwhelmingly in the higher-priced brackets and to a lesser degree in lower-priced homes.

A few cities reported a steady market, or even increases, while some said business still was brisk in the lower-price brackets.

In city after city, however, housing experts said buyers were becoming more selective and in many cases were holding off in the belief that prices will come down.

City Officials Urge Speed on TEW Bill

The American Municipal Association, representing 9500 cities, yesterday firmly called on Congress "as its first item of business, to pass long-delayed housing legislation, similar to the Wagner-Ellender-Taft bill."

The action was taken after a panel of city officials, speaking at the group's 1948 conference in the Statler Hotel, emphasized:

1. Cities consider housing their number one problem.

2. "Slum areas demand a lion's share of American city costs, but return only a jackal's share of the costs." The cost of police, fire and health services in areas of bad housing is way out of proportion to taxes received from the sections.

3. The Federal Government should shoulder most of the obligation for assisting low-income groups to obtain permanent housing — not wartime substandard housing.

George Edwards, president of the Detroit, Mich., Common Council, told 500 mayors and other city officials, that the Congress should be told in "plain language" that a bill providing a billion dollars for long-term Federal loans for slum clearance and construction of low-rent public housing for low-income groups is essential immediately.

He added that it should also include contracts for construction of permanent housing projects replacing temporary war housing units now in use.

The town manager of Greenbelt, Md., Charles T. McDonald, supported Edwards' position, declaring that persons with less than $3500 a year income would probably never be in the market for permanent housing because of lack of means. He said Government rental housing, such as now exists at Greenbelt, was therefore essential.

W. B. Hartsfield, Mayor of Atlanta, Ga., urged the association to "take a firm and unequivocal stand for something equivalent to the Wagner-Ellender-Taft bill. "If the Federal Government can spend money on hogs, peanuts and fish ponds, it could spend a little on housing," he declared as the audience applauded.

The TEW bill proposed a five-year 500,000-unit low-rent public housing program sponsored by the Federal Government. During the last session, it was bottled up by the Republican-controlled House Rules Committee, marking the fourth year that it had been presented without success.

The association nominating committee proposed DeLesseps S. Morrison, 36-year-old Mayor of New Orleans, as president during the coming year. John W. Huss, executive director of the Michigan Municipal League, was nominated for vice president. Elections will be held today and the convention will close Wednesday afternoon.

Porter Files Ruled Open to Mrs. Gizycka

Permission to examine many of the papers of the late Charles B. Porter, former treasurer of the Washington Times-Herald, yesterday was given attorneys for Mrs. Felicia Gizycka.

Mrs. Gizycka, daughter of the late Mrs. Eleanor M. Patterson, hopes to find in the Porter papers evidence that will aid in her challenge of her mother's will, which involves a $16,500,000 estate.

Porter was onetime financial adviser to Mrs. Patterson, and a major beneficiary under her will only to be cut out of the document later. He plunged to his death from a Charleston, W. Va., hotel room window September 14, less than two months after Mrs. Patterson's death.

According to earlier pretrial testimony in the Patterson case, Porter had hundreds of papers relating to Mrs. Patterson's activities, and Mrs. Gizycka sought to examine 129 of these documents and folders.

District Court Judge James W. Morris yesterday gave permission for her attorneys to examine 125 of them. While attorneys for the will's executors—who are defending validity of the instrument—said they had no objection to this examination, C. F. R. Ogilby, collector for Porter's estate, objected to inspection of a few items on the grounds they were purely personal.

Truman to Light Washington Tree From Missouri

President Truman will light the Nation's Christmas tree on the White House lawn by pushing a button at his home in Independence, Mo., on Christmas Eve.

The President also will make his traditional Christmas Eve speech from Independence, according to Charles G. Ross, Presidential Secretary.

The Chief Executive has not decided when he will leave for Missouri, Ross said. He added that Mr. Truman probably will fly to Independence for Christmas and remain there four or five days.

Pin Ball Game Snares 6-Year-Old

DANNY CORRIGAN
As Police Retrieve Finger

New York, Dec. 13 (AP).—Six-year-old Daniel Corrigan, a baseball slot-machine game fan, was charged with an error last night.

He was in and out of a candy store several times during the evening, jiggling the controls of a seven-balls-for-a-penny game on the counter.

Finally, he got a finger jammed into a hole in the penny slot. The proprietor tried vaseline, oil and applications of cold water, but the finger would not come out.

A police emergency squad was called, and it worked for more than an hour dismantling the apparatus before freeing the finger.

Daniel went to a hospital where a doctor gave him a lollypop after finding he had suffered only a bruise.

President Truman's assistant, John R. Steelman, called tonight for a Federal scholarship program in colleges to help wage "the struggle between democracy and totalitarianism."

In a speech prepared for the Southern Governors' Conference, Steelman gave what looked like a preview of the general education program which Mr. Truman will submit to the new Congress.

Steelman, one of the President's top advisors, called also for:

1. Assignment of "the highest priority," in the education field, to legislation authorizing Federal grants to States for operating expenses of grade and high schools.

2. "Careful study" of what, if any, Federal aid should be provided for school construction.

3. Early creation by Congress of a national science foundation. That program should provide for the Federal Government to devote "more funds to scientific training and research in its own laboratories and research agencies," as well as "through grants to colleges and universities, and through scholarships and fellowships."

FHA Ruled Eubject to Suit Anywhere in U.S.

Richmond, Va., Dec. 13 (AP).—The United States Court of Appeals for the Fourth Circuit has ruled that the Federal Housing Administration can be sued in any district where it is doing business on causes of action arising from business done there. It reversed a Newport News District Court decision.

Attorneys said the point had never been settled before.

The ruling, in effect, restores to a pending status a suit for more than $600,000 brought against FHA by Seven Oaks, Inc., former operators of a Newport News housing project.

The Appeals Court declared: "The contention that it was the intention of Congress that the venue of suits brought against the Housing Administration be limited to the District of Columbia . . . or that the administration should have the discretion to say where it might be sued elsewhere by waiving venue, will not bear analysis."

The corporation had charged in that the FHA had insisted on installation of inflammable asphalt material.

3 Charter Choices Stand Unopposed

As deadline approached last night for filing petitions of candidacy for Montgomery County's scheduled January 6 council election, Charter Committee candidates were unopposed in three of the county's five council districts.

The deadline was last night.

Ward W. Caddington, clerk to the County Board of Elections Supervisors, said as the deadline neared he had received only one petition from each of the First, Third and Fourth Districts.

The petitions, he said, were from P. G. Ligon, of Brinklow, District No. 1; Thomas C. Kelley, of Darnestown, District No. 3, and Mrs. Ralph Himstead, of Chevy Chase, District No. 4. All were indorsed by the charter committee and their petitions were filed several days ago.

Also qualified on the charter committee "ticket" were: Augustus R. Selby, Germantown, council district No. 2; J. Douglas Bradshaw, of Takoma Park, council district No. 5; Frederic P. Lee, of Bethesda, and Lewis Meriam, Kensington, both "at large."

Others who had filed before the deadline were: Mrs. Alma T. Opal, of Takoma Park, running as an "at large" candidate; Romeo W. Horad, of Silver Spring, District No. 5, and Chares K. Davies, jr., of Gaithersburg, District No. 2.

Charter Vote Is Held Legal

tion and the provisions of the charter.

"But when we consider the conditions that existed relative to the election of state and county officers when Article 17 was adopted, and the purposes behind its adoption, we believe there is no real conflict."

Welch, citing the State constitution, had contended that the election could not be held legally until 1950, since the last county election was in 1946.

The Montgomery court, in its opinion, however, ruled the constitutional provision cited by Welsh applies only to regularly recurring general elections to fill offices for full terms.

Contention Answered Indirectly

Another contention by Welsh that commissioners, elected in 1946, are entitled to full four-year terms was answered only indirectly in the opinion.

By inference, the court placed the same interpretation on the four-year term constitutional provision as it did on the quadrennial election statute.

Siding with Charter Attorney Lee, the court ruled that neither the Maryland General Assembly nor the former county commissioners can enact legislation for Montgomery County, under the charter now in effect. Only the first elected county council under the charter has such authority, it declared.

To a contention by Welsh that the petition method of nominating candidates for the council is invalid, the judges ruled that nomination by petitions is "one of the methods allowed by law and by the charter."

The court said it would decide any question pertaining to the nomination-method when such question comes up.

Welsh had cited the Lindsay Act to claim the petition method of nominating is illegal.

"We believe," the judges declared, "that one of the main purposes of the Lindsay law was to prevent the insertion, in any charter that might be adopted, of a provision providing for the election of council members on a nonpartisan basis only."

The ruling was on a demurrer filed by the defendants in the suit, the Board of Election Supervisors, the County Charter and Committee and Charter Board. The court sustained the demurrer and dismissed the bill of complaint, ordering the plaintiff to pay court costs.

7 Arrested In Tennessee Terrorism

Tarlton, Tenn., Dec. 13 (AP).—Seven men have been arrested in connection with a "reign of terror" by hooded nightriders and a series of fires, Sheriff Jim Meeks said today.

The sheriff said the arrests apparently had ended the trouble which has kept Tarlton citizens uneasy for months.

Assistant District Attorney General A. F. Sloan said the investigation was started after the barn of Herman Hobbs, foreman of the grand jury, was destroyed by fire last winter. The grand jury had been investigating illegal liquor traffic in the county.

Later the home of Easton Brown, who had testified before the grand jury, was set ablaze, and another man who appeared before the grand jury was threatened, Sloan reported.

Other fires destroyed or damaged two stores and the Tarlton School.

The terrorists were not members of any organized nightriding outfit, but merely used "crude home-made hoods" to hide their identity, Sloan said.

Vernal Winter Brings Floods, Pea Soup Fogs

By the United Press

A heavy fog blanket slowed air and ground travel in the Midwest yesterday while flood waters forced city and farm residents from their homes in Oregon.

Unseasonably warm temperatures and moisture-laden air produced a pea-soup fog over most of Indiana and parts of Illinois, Michigan and Ohio.

At Columbus, Ind., 10 persons were injured when a bus, a truck and an automobile collided on a fog-sshrouded highway.

The rampaging Willamette River in Oregon, which already has forced nearly 1000 persons from their homes, was falling rapidly at upstream points but still was dangerous in its lower reaches.

Some farm residents moved into town at Corvallis when the river surged 4 feet above flood stage. Some 700 persons at Eugene and about 200 at Glenwood already had been evacuated.

A crest has expected at Portland late Tuesday, but officials said no serious flood threat was anticipated.

A slow-moving cold wave from the Yukon had reached northern Minnesota and North Dakota, dipping the mercury to 11 degrees below zero at International Falls, Minn.

Forecasters said the cold air mass would move lazily southward, gradually bringing colder temperatures to most of the country by the end of the week.

Outmoded Cabinet

Few facts are better recognized among students of government and experienced officials than the obsolescence of the President's Cabinet as a policy-making body. Governmental policies have become so numerous and so complex that no one body of men can hope to deal with all of them. Consequently, it has become necessary for the President to deal with each Cabinet member separately. But this leads to conflicting policies, with one department often working at cross-purposes to another. Such disputes have to be ironed out by the President himself, and no one man can possibly carry such a burden along with all the other responsibilities devolving upon the President.

A task force of the Hoover Commission studying governmental organization in the sphere of foreign affairs has recommended that this vital task of supplanting several conflicting policies with one thoroughly digested policy be assigned to high-level committees. The National Security Council serves as a model. If a similar agency were functioning in the field of foreign relations and related domestic affairs, it would presumably have representation from the Commerce, Agriculture, Treasury and Interior Departments and various other agencies in addition to the State Department. It would have an executive secretariat which could investigate problems, plan committee meetings and in general facilitate the work of devising a unified policy. This group would, of course, work in close consultation with the President and under his general direction. The important point is that it could relieve the President of the necessity of choosing between conflicting segments of policy, as he must today.

In our opinion, the proposal has a great deal of promise. Once it was thought that the executive assistants given the President would bring about the needed coordination. The trouble was that executive assistants cannot properly supervise or direct department heads who are directly responsible to the President. What is needed is the shaping of policy by the give and take of interested department heads directly under the President, and that can be accomplished only by some means of bringing those officials together, with the aid of a common staff.

Such high-level policy committees would not obviate the need for an over-all legislative-executive council in which leaders of Congress would be brought together with the President and selected department heads for the discussion of national policies on a wider scale. The inter-department committees that the Hoover Commission task force is talking about would be wholly within the executive branch. Their chief concern would be administrative problems, but they would doubtless also greatly help the President in developing sound policies for further deliberation in the proposed legislative-executive council. The need for new organization to meet new problems has been thoroughly demonstrated. Bold thinking and courageous action will be necessary to bring it about.

Hounds Of The Chase

The idea of a code of fair procedure for congressional committees, which this newspaper has long and ardently advocated, is gaining belated support as a result of the antics of the Committee on Un-American Activities. Many members of Congress and citizen groups are interested. Congressman Holifield is sponsoring a bill designed to compel the House Committee on Un-American Activities to "adopt basic principles of justice." Of course, any such bill ought to apply to all congressional investigating committees and ought not to invoke court rules. But it may serve as a basis for discussion.

More important is the report of the Bill of Rights Committee of the Association of the Bar of the City of New York, which has made an extensive study of congressional investigation techniques. This bar committee has come to the conclusion that no one is immune from the searching inquiries of Congress even if its questions delve into the witness' private affairs, previous utterances and affiliations, political or otherwise. Freedom of speech does not give freedom of silence—when Congress wishes to know. But the committee does emphatically recommend a seven-point program that would protect the rights of witnesses called before investigating committees.

This program would require the purpose of the investigation to be clearly stated and the questions asked to be relevant and germane. A witness at a public hearing could be advised by his counsel as to his rights while testifying; also at a private hearing unless a majority of the committee should vote otherwise. At the conclusion of his testimony every witness would have the opportunity of making an oral or written statement pertinent to the subject. An accurate stenographic record of the hearing would be made available to the witness or his counsel. No photographs, moving pictures, television or radio broadcasts of the proceeding would be permitted during the taking of testimony. Any person defamed by the committee would be permitted to file a sworn statement for the record, testify in person, have the committee summon the witnesses who testified against him for cross-examination of not more than one hour per witness, and have the committee summon witnesses to testify in his behalf. These rules would be applied to all congressional investigation committees.

Five of these seven points were covered in part or in full by the series of editorials which The Washington Post published on this subject earlier in the year. We think the New York bar committee has made a notable contribution to the shaping of a proper code of fair procedure for congressional committees and hope that a bill carrying out its views will be introduced. The bar committee also lays great stress upon the "lack of a proper sense of fairness and decency" on the part of some individuals who conduct congressional inquiries. We do not agree that it is impossible to do anything about this personal element. Congressmen who are in a position to shake down witnesses, who have axes to grind and no understanding of the concept of fair play can be kept off investigating committees.

Congressional investigators have too often acted as hounds of the chase. And, as G. K. Chesterson said of the early Nazi patriots, if they "are trained as a pack of hounds to follow a scent blown on every breeze, to go through all fences and across all fields, they are trained in a certain spirit which is quite certainly of some peril to their neighbors." Congress ought to entrust its investigations to keen, thorough and fair-minded searchers after facts rather than hounds of the chase.

Test Of The Rio Pact

The invasion of Costa Rica is more important for what it means to the inter-American system than as a military operation. Most reports place the number of invaders at not more than 300, and, so far, they have been successfully contained in a small pocket in northwest Costa Rica. If the allegations of the Costa Rican government are true, however, the invasion was launched from within Nicaragua and a number of Nicaraguan guardsmen are participating in the attack. This makes the fracas an international matter. Costa Rica's appeal to the Organization of American States poses for the first time the issue of collective action against aggression which was formulated in the Rio pact.

Outwardly the affair might be regarded as merely an attempt by the Costa Rican political "outs" to recoup their fortunes. The reported leader of the invasion is Dr. Rafael Calderon Guardia, who was defeated in the Costa Rican presidential election last March. Calderon Guardia had the support of the then incumbent Picado government. Immediately the government declared the election void on grounds of fraud, a decision subsequently revoked by the supreme electoral tribunal. The refusal of the Picado regime to yield to the winning candidate, Otilio Ulate, gave rise to a revolt headed by Jose Figueres, the present provisional president. The revolt was successful and Calderon Guardia fled the country. Meanwhile Figueres has been restoring constitutional forms and has promised to yield the government to Ulate in 1950.

What complicates the tangle is the question of outside aid and the position of the Communists. During the March revolt the Calderon Guardia-Picado faction had the energetic support of the Communists, and, in an apparent alliance between communism and reaction, also received aid from the dictatorial Somoza regime in Nicaragua. Figueres, who has assumed a strong anti-Communist stance, received help from Guatemala. Now the jumble is increased by Figueres' charges that the current invasionary expedition includes the Communists as well as Nicaraguan forces. General Somoza, meanwhile, has denied that Nicaragua has anything to do with it.

Foreign Ministers of the nations adhering to the Rio pact are to decide today whether to call a full-dress consultation preparatory to issuance of a cease-fire order, an invocation of sanctions or even a decision to give military aid short of war. Certainly they can do no less than order a complete on-the-spot investigation. Even if the invasionary forces do not have the active aid of Nicaragua, that state is culpable if it permitted those forces to form within its borders, for Nicaragua has ratified and bound itself by the terms of the Rio pact. There is no time for indecision or temporizing. What is at stake is a matter of fundamental principle, and what the Organization of American States does now will determine whether collective security in the Americas is a reality or merely a meaningless phrase.

Money Power

The Research and Policy Committee of the the CED (Committee for Economic Development) has released a report discussing the contributions that monetary and fiscal policy can make to attainment of greater economic stability. An earlier report dealt with the principles that, in the opinion of the committee, should govern our budget policy. Simply stated, its view is that tax rates should be set to yield budget surpluses in periods of full employment, such surpluses being used to retire Government debt. Thereafter tax rates should be held stable, barring major changes in national policy, with the result that revenues would increase with any further rise in national income, and decline with a drop in national income.

Although the recommendations regarding budget policy are repeated, the present report ranges over a much broader field of inquiry, embracing related problems of debt management and monetary policy. Since the CED experts consider economic stability to be the primary objective of monetary as well as fiscal policy, it is not surprising that they indulge in a good deal of guarded criticism of the Federal Reserve policy of supporting the prices of long-term Government bonds slightly above par. For this policy, by introducing the support money into circulation, undeniably interferes with the employment of customary instrumentalities of credit control as an aid to economic stability. As the report states: "It is precisely in inflationary conditions when the demand for credit is high that the Federal Reserve is likely to be called upon to buy in support of the market and thus to provide banks with reserves, unless the Federal Reserve is able to offset the effect of its purchases in some other way."

Given the premise that general economic stability is the primary objective of monetary policy, and takes precedence over considerations of the possible unsettling effects on the capital market of a change in the bond-support policy, the report concludes that the Federal Reserve "should feel free to reduce the support level unless it finds a superior alternative way of bringing about a monetary restriction if and when that is required by the objective of economic stability." This cautious statement does not imply that the CED experts favor an immediate change in bond-support policies, since the Federal Reserve authorities admittedly are able for the time being to offset the inflationary effect of bond purchases by sales of short-term Government securities.

The controversy that has arisen over this one issue of supporting Government bond prices emphasizes the difficulties of formulating a comprehensive body of recommendations embracing and coordinating fiscal and monetary policies that would meet with the approval of legislators and officials who exercise policy-making functions. For that reason the CED recommendation for the establishment of a temporary nonpartisan commission on national monetary and fiscal policy, including private citizens as well as public officials, is well worth consideration. As stated in the report, it has been more than 35 years since any such over-all review of our financial structure and problems has been undertaken. Meanwhile, revolutionary changes have occurred in the country's banking system and the financial and business structure. The growth of public indebtedness, for example, has given rise to problems of debt management not even dreamed of a few decades ago, while the huge outlays of the Federal Government have injected new elements of instability into the economic structure, making the Federal budget today "an instrument of unprecedented power for good or ill."

Disenchantment

Mr. Churchill in his speech to the Commons the other day made public the text of a letter he had sent to Stalin in 1944, expressing some anxiety concerning the future relations between Soviet Russia and its satellites on one side and the Western Allies on the other. This letter was dispatched just after Stalin had been informed that Heinrich Himmler, with Count Bernadotte as intermediary, was beseeching the British and Americans for peace. But after this evidence of good faith Churchill told Stalin that the test of whether there was to be continued friendship and collaboration or yet another alignment of irreconcilable ideologies and forces would come in Poland. Britain would not tolerate any government in Poland that was hostile to Russia, neither would it recognize any government inimical to Western concepts of political liberty.

There is not, wrote Mr. Churchill to Stalin, > much comfort in looking into a future where you and the countries you dominate, plus the Communist parties in many other states, are all drawn up on one side, and those who rallied to the English-speaking nations, and their associates or dominions, are on the other.

> It is quite obvious that their quarrel would tear the world to pieces, and all of us leading men on either side who had anything to do with that would be shamed before history. Even embarking on a long period of suspicion, of abuse and counter-abuse and of opposing policies, would be disaster, hampering the development of world prosperity for the masses which is obtainable only by our trinity.
> I hope there is no word or phrase in this outpouring of my heart to you, Mr. Stalin, which unwittingly gives offense. If so let me know; but do not, I beg of you, my friend, underrate the divergencies which are opening about matters which you may think are small, but which are symbolic of the way the English-speaking democracies look at life.

Beneath the characteristic rhetoric we may perceive the extent of Mr. Churchill's misgivings about the extravagant concessions that had been made at Yalta and Tehran to Russian ambitions. Suppose that, instead of being satisfied to consolidate their already enormous power, the Russians should use it as a fulcrum for extending their domination over the whole globe? The phrase about "being shamed before history," indicates that Mr. Churchill's conscience was already troubled on this point.

What the letter seems to show is that statesmen no less than peoples fall victims to illusions. Mr. Churchill's illusion was that the cooperation which a common enemy had forced upon three great powers would become habitual with them. He was, of course, by no means alone in this illusion; it was shared by the greater part of his countrymen and by the greater part of ours. It is to Mr. Churchill's credit that he escaped from it sooner than most of us.

"U. N. And China"

My attention has been called to the letter, signed "B. M.", your issue of December 7 under the caption "U. N. and China."

This communication is a blatant forgery and was not sent by anyone now connected with the staff of Foundry Church.

The letter quotes a paragraph from a 1939 issue of Foundry Facts, the weekly organ of Foundry Church. The paragraph is a protest against sending scrap iron, etc., which would fall into the hands of the Japanese invaders of China.

What that statement a decade ago has to do with the present situation in China is certainly not clear. The whole letter gives the impression that Foundry Church and the editors of Foundry Facts would now sanction direct dealing with the communistic brigands who are devastating China and making missionary work almost impossible.

Inasmuch as such a suggestion is coupled with Foundry Facts, as the editor of that paper I desire to say, speaking for myself and knowing what is the attitude of the leadership of this church, that we are not in favor of any understandings whatsoever with the Communists. The only realistic policy with regard to them is to defeat them utterly. It has been proved beyond the shadow of a doubt that they are not just the agrarian reformers that they often pose to be. They are the stooges and tools of communistic Russia.

Russian communism—and the Chinese brand is a branch of it—deals in deceit and trickery. It has no pity or conscience. It does not use our dictionary, let alone our Bible. To put the Chinese situation in the hands of the United Nations would simply mean to put it within range of the Russian veto which has stymied the United Nations up to date.

The forger who wrote the letter printed in your columns evidently has trouble with both the head and the heart.

Court-Martial Reform

I read with great interest of the President's promulgation of the new Manual for Courts Martial, U. S. Army, 1949.

That this document is dated December 7, 1948, is in reality a noteworthy achievement because of the determined opposition to change, and dilatory procedures, followed by the armed services generally, despite the glowing terms of Secretary Royall's press release announcing the President's action.

Many persons who have diligently attempted to bring about this and other reforms in military justice recall the date, January 13, 1947, at which time the chairman of the Senate Armed Services Committee pledged his committee to handle the matter of court-martial reform "satisfactorily." That they indeed handled it "satisfactorily" was demonstrated at the time that the amendment forcing the revision of the manual was adopted by the Senate on June 10, 1948, with the continued opposition of the chairman of the Armed Forces Committee apparent.

Delay, procrastination and maintenance of the status quo through the device of piling service-sponsored investigation upon investigation, with the cooperation of certain members of Congress, has effectively sabotaged desirable and rightful reform.

For example, the Navy Department, beginning with the then Secretary Forrestal, has investigated the court-martial system and requested recommendations for reform from two Ballantyne boards, a Keefe board, a McGuire board and an individual report from the Rev. Father White, former dean of Catholic University law school, to the tune of more than a quarter of a million dollars in expenses, capped by a joint request submitted with the Army and Air Force to Congress through the Secretary of National Defense for further time to determine a feasible means of enacting a "unified" program of military justice.

There will be no satisfactory solution to the problem of a fair and equitable system of military justice until the final review of court martials is placed in the hands of a truly independent civilian board or other civilian body.

Blood In Hyderabad

We have not heard anything from Hyderabad since its surrender to India and the establishment of a military regime there. Frequently one comes across reports of the Indian press telling stories about "peace and order" established in the state and some statements forced out of the helpless Nizam at the "pistol point." A few letters that have escaped, however, are enough to show the atrocities done by the Indian army and the Hindu mobs and the "blood bath" of the Moslems going on in the state.

Moslem officials are being removed from all important government jobs, many of them have been imprisoned and some have even been put to death. As far as the general Moslem population is concerned, their fate is even worse. Col. T. A. Moseley, a British army officer, who held an important position in the Hyderabad army, said in a statement, "I have seen enough of killings in the Banjara Hills and lootings in Hyderabad (capital) itself. When a mob comes to loot a Moslem shop the Madras and Sikh troops stop them with one hand no doubt, but with the other they beckon them to come."

The genocide of Moslems in Hyderabad has assumed such proportions that even the Hindu citizens of the state are no longer able to stand the horrible sight. In a letter sent by Mr. A. N. Sawmy, a Hindu citizen of Hyderabad, to the governor of Sind, the cruelties and mass murders done by the Indian army and the Hindus are shown to be worse than those practiced by the Nazis under Hitler's regime.

The question of Hyderabad's independence has been postponed in the Security Council, since India came forward with a "fait accompli," just in time to force Hyderabad to withdraw its case. There is one thing that may compel India to modify her policy. It is the recent adoption of a genocide convention by the legal committee of the U.N. General Assembly, which makes genocide an international crime. Victims of aggression still have their eyes on Mr. Moin Navaz Jung, leader of the Hyderabad delegation in Paris, who is anxiously waiting for the Hyderabad case to be taken up. The least that we expect the Security Council to do for the helpless Moslems of Hyderabad is to send impartial observers to Hyderabad completely empowered to investigate and report on the conditions prevailing there.

New White House

Now that Congress is to be asked to appropriate a million dollars or so for the repair of the White House, the time has come to consider whether the United States should not build a new palace for its President and delegate the old one to the status of a museum.

The present White House, sentimentally enshrined in the hearts of the people, is known to be an obsolete if not permanently unsuitable structure for housing the head of the Nation. Also, from the standpoint of national prestige, the building in its architecture and appurtenances is grossly unfit. Only 150 miles from the Capital, at Williamsburg, the Rockefellers have reconstructed a building—the palace of the Governor of Virginia—which puts the White House as it is today to shame.

To give visible proof of the prestige of the Presidency, Congress should be asked to appropriate sums adequate to build a new White House which, in line with the traditions of the American people, is simple in design but adequate for the many functions of the presidential household. ANTHONY NETBOY.

"Battered Chest"

Your December 9 editorial "Battered Chest" deserves the concern of all people living in Greater Washington. In connection with your quest for explanations I would like to hazard the following guesses as contributing reason for the failure of the Community Chest drive:

Agencies in the Chest are not thoroughly enough checked upon with regard to their activities in the interest of people who cannot otherwise afford the services offered.

Individuals supported by Chest agencies may not be subject to constant review, and as a result beneficiaries may not be in need of support while the free services continue. On the other hand, lengthy investigations upon receiving a first request for help may cause undue hardship and préclude true charity.

Community services, such as public golf or tennis courses, benefit the middle incomes who can afford the necessary equipment but do not benefit the real needy.

Chest-supported agencies, such as Ys, compete with private enterprises, e.g., schools, in offering courses at fees that no private school can match.

L. P. WINTER,
Washington.

Jules Counts

I believe that your newspaper can render invaluable assistance to Jules Counts, who recently lost both of his hands while conducting scientific research for the Army. Jerry Kluttz has shown very clearly the inadequacies of the system of compensation for civilian employes.

As a housewife, I know that it is difficult to pay for rent and food with $116 a month; add clothing, and it is even more difficult; add the expense of caring for a 3-year-old child and total all the other necessities of life, and it becomes impossible.

He is forced to live on his accumulated sick and annual leave, and look forward to a reduction of more than two thirds of his former earning power.

Surely, something can be done which can more justly be called compensation for this great loss. He needs that help very badly, right now, while he is going through this critical adjustment period. It is our duty to see to it that our Congressmen or appropriate agencies take action to provide adequate care for Jules Counts and his family.

Washington Calling

By Marquis Childs

Hocus-Pocus

BOTH at home and abroad, the running battle over who spied on what and what spies shall be punished, and how, is doing infinite harm. Abroad it makes this supposedly rich and powerful country look ludicrous beyond words.

Here at home it makes a matter that should be considered with the utmost seriousness look like an early Mack Sennett comedy. We have had everything but an exchange of custard pies, and that will probably come sooner or later. This would, in fact, be the moment to subpoena Charlie Chaplin.

It began with the over-eager publicity of the House Un-American Activities Committee. That established a circus atmosphere almost as much as though an old-time spieler had stood outside the door of the committee room haranguing the crowd to come in to see the wonders on display.

One stunt was to show a committee guard sleeping in front of a safe containing the stolen documents. The public gathered the idea that these were so vital to the security of the Nation that a 24-hour guard was absolutely essential.

This is bunk. The documents are about as vital to American security today as a 1938 calendar. I have been given this assurance by the very best authority.

In perhaps two or three places they might slightly interfere with the present conduct of foreign relations, giving the Russians a minor propaganda handle. But even that is debatable. Experts could well disagree about this.

IMMEDIATELY, of course, one of the committee leaks let it be known that the Administration wanted to keep the documents secret because they contained material highly embarrassing to prominent Administration figures. Again on excellent authority, I can say that this is also untrue. One minor official, whose name most people could not even identify, might do a little squirming. He is no longer connected with the Government.

The sensible thing would be to give out all the material at once, possibly with the passages mentioned above omitted. To release a few of the documents as the committee has done is to leave the impression that others of a far more significant nature are being kept back.

The fact that the documents are not vital to national security now, 10 years after they were removed from the files, does not detract from their importance. As Sumner Welles testifies, they were secret documents and they could have been used to break the State Department code. To remove them was a crime and those who are guilty should be punished.

There is an orderly way to proceed to do this. It is not by klieg lights, by inflammatory statements, by public imprecations shouted from the housetops. That is the surest way to spread the widest doubt and confusion in the public mind.

PRESIDENT Truman's off-hand press conference remarks were in this vein. But at the same time it must be said that the Un-American Committee seems determined to prove that the President was right when he said this was merely the final political fireworks of a committee that is about to expire. Two of the members taking part in the carnival of statements and leaks and counter-leaks are lame ducks defeated on November 2.

The administration has much to answer for in the whole miserable mess. Since these were for the most part State Department documents, it is strange that Acting Secretary of State Robert Lovett has not assumed some authority.

Lovett has every right to ask to be heard. Yet from the department we get nothing at all. The Acting Secretary could quickly end the hocus-pocus over national security.

The law enforcement arm of the Government is the Department of Justice. To present the espionage case before the grand jury in New York, the Justice Department must have access to the microfilms that Whittaker Chambers turned over to the committee. Yet the committee repeatedly refused the request of the Justice Department and the FBI to examine the films, allowing them to see only prints from them.

In several instances the Congress now expiring tried to usurp the law enforcement and punishment function of the Executive branch of the Government. The Un-American Committee offered the most glaring examples. With this kind of internecine warfare going on, there can be no order. The Eighty-first Congress will meet in three weeks and there should be a little more coordination after that.

"Bachelor's Day"

I propose a "bachelor's day" for The Washington Post.

This might fill the first page of what is ordinarily the women's section. You might tell us where we can get clothes mending of all sorts done. Articles on where to get escorts, chaperonage customs, Henderson Castle, Just-for-Fun Club, public socials where stags are welcome, where a bachelor can entertain a few friends if he has no living room, statistics on District of Columbia unmarried men and women, would be fine.

Defense Strategy

A Communication

SEVENTEEN billions for the Marshall Plan, 17 billions for a five-year Air Force, 15 billions for the next year's armed forces, five billions for China, 80 per cent of all taxes spent on the liquidation, prevention and preparation of and for war—years ago my uncle said to me, "Don't think this country is too big to go broke."

On all counts, America is the wealthiest nation in the world. But the United States, or any other nation, is not so wealthy as to afford such unproductive expenditures. The Berlin airlift is a drop in the bucket, yet that drop costs 100 million dollars a year. How much does it cost Russia? You answer. We spend billions while Russia spends only millions.

How much does the Marshall Plan cost Russia? The huge American five-year Air Force? Fifteen billions here and umpteen billions there? The slightest Soviet move in this direction or threat in that direction is enough ot send a few more billions of dollars scurrying through our fingers. Yes, the Soviet strategy is financial—and smart!

I DO NOT believe Russia would dare a war, unless cornered, until the atom bomb is produced behind the iron curtain. It undoubtedly is not now. But until it is produced, what better strategy is there than to force her only strong opponent to waste and waste and waste its real economic and industrial potential? These billions of dollars now and untold additional billions in the very near future will bring inevitable inflation—far worse than now—to America. Then a bust, and relief, bread lines, riots, economic chaos.

Now, Russia's air force, atom bomb production, and schnorkel submarine fleet will emerge from behind the iron curtain. A few atom bombs that some Americans want to drop today will be dropped, indeed, but by the Soviet air force.

Is there today any man insane or foolhardy enough, excepting of course Henry Wallace and others of his ilk, to say we should not expend these unproductive billions? No, there is not, including this writer. If we throw this great wealth into the sewer, we go broke. And if we don't throw it away, we risk military and political annihilation. There lies the dilemma.

ONE PRACTICAL solution to the dilemma is a planned and regimented economy. But this would utterly destroy American individualism and democracy. We would become more like Soviet economic and political theory than is Russia herself. Our standard of living would drop, for we still would have to pour billions into the military trough—however much our program slowed down the Soviet move to world conquest. And worse, private enterprise and American personal self-sufficiency would disappear.

More and more would administrative and productive genius be drawn into Government. Where else would one find the opportunities of power and newly legislated wealth formerly obtained through the economic grass roots of the Nations? This must not and shall not be the fate of America. We are better off dead and free than alive and morally enslaved.

A second solution to the dilemma is preventive war. But actually it is not practical, because the American people in their hearts cannot bring themselves to initiate a shooting war however much logic dictates its necessity. Presently, then, such a course of action may be dismissed.

A third solution to this dilemma is to call the Russian bluff. This is highly practical and should work very successfully. Soviet strategy is financial: so let's throw it right back at them. She is forcing us to spend uncounted billions of dollars on economic foreign aid and rearmament. So we do it. What then? We use it! For centuries past, sea power and powerful seven-seas navies have been used to force diplomatic struggles and to keep the peace. This form of peace enforcement can be repeated—this time, though, with military air power.

LET US SPEND these billions on economic aid and military armaments. Let us create an Air Force second to no one or any combination of foreign air forces, including even our allies. Russia is steering us in this direction, but she does not expect us to go all the way or even a part of the way along the road of realistic diplomatic maturity.

First, we must build this powerful Air Force, comparable to the historic Elizabethan navy. Second, we must exhibit forthright character and diplomatic realism. This demands a moral boldness based upon self-conviction of democratic rights. In a word, it means drawing an imaginary line beyond which dictatorship anywhere shall not pass. American institutions will vanish unless we have both a realistic understanding of world politics and Soviet expansion and a plan to control their evil machinations.

There is no need for war. But there is need for the will and the capability of preventing war and/or economic chaos. American military might in being, backed by a popular will to call the bluff of dictatorship, can prevent catastrophe, generations of suffering: yes, even the paralysis of Western civilization.

Russia arbitrarily forces us into a Berlin airlift. With an "Elizabethan" air force, carrying atom bombs, cannot we, not arbitrarily but morally, force her into similar positions all over the world? And without dropping a single atom bomb? Of course we can.

We must not go bankrupt, as Russia has it planned. We must not regiment our economy and our living, for there lies the death of American and world freedom. We cannot initiate preventive war: therefore we must be strong in both character and military might.

We have the cards and we presently have the money. Our opponent has only wicked guile and treachery. Let us use our God-given resources to make Russia herself go broke economically and politically.

High Court Rejects Oklahoma Attack on 'Negro' Ballot Label

By The Associated Press

The Supreme Court yesterday rejected an attack on the validity of an Oklahoma law requiring that the race of nonwhite candidates in primary and general elections be designated on the ballots.

The court held the case presented to it is "moot," meaning no practical question is involved, since it concerned last November's balloting.

The attack was filed by David Hodge and Wilbur G. Moffitte, candidates for the office of justice of the peace in Tulsa County.

They appealed to the high tribunal from a refusal by a special three-judge Federal court at Tulsa to issue an injunction prohibiting the county election board from placing the word "Negro" after their names on ballots used in the election last November 2.

The special court, in refusing such an order, said the election law requirement created no unconstitutional discrimination.

Anti-Discrimination Gains Reported in N. J.

Newark, N. J., Dec. 13 (U.P.).—Voluntary compliance with New Jersey's antidiscrimination law has increased steadily through the three years of the law's existence, the State antidiscrimination division said today in its report for the fiscal year ending last June.

The report urged that the Legislature act to curb what it described as "a very serious act of discrimination" in the admittance policies of private business schools.

It said a survey of private hospitals would be made to determine whether discriminatory practices exist in the treatment of patients and hiring of staffs.

The report said that all the more than 500 complaints received in the three years had been settled without recourse to public hearing or court action. A majority of complaints were for alleged racial prejudice. The majority of such complaints charged that employers refused to hire on that ground.

"While conditions in the State are by no means ideal," the report said, "New Jersey continues to be among the leaders for the rest of the country."

Bishop Stamm Praises Truman Rights Stand

President Truman was praised yesterday for "the convincing evidence of your devotion to the securing and maintaining of human rights in our country."

The praise came from Bishop John S. Stamm, newly elected head of the Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America.

Bishop Stamm called at the White House, and told newsmen he had read to Mr. Truman a statement saying in part:

"We are grateful, Mr. President, for the convincing evidence which you have given of your own devotion to the securing and maintaining of human rights to our country. We rejoice that political leadership and religious conviction can join hands to bring about conditions in which all men shall more fully enjoy the basic rights and freedoms which are their due as children of God."

Latin Intervention

By Sumner Welles

Communist Influence On Principle

BECAUSE of my warning in this column that several American governments were undermining the inter-American regional system by flagrant intervention in their neighbors' internal concerns, the Communist press in Latin America has been honoring me with a series of personal attacks.

These diatribes are of interest only because of their indication of the present Communist line. In the endeavor to destroy hemispheric unity, the effort is being made to confuse public opinion concerning the basic principles on which the Organization of American States rests, and, by constant repetition, to make it accept as gospel a number of grotesque falsehoods regarding the activities of United States officials.

The first evidence I have seen here of any repercussions from this propaganda was a number of letters published recently in several leading newspapers. I have no knowledge of their authors' affiliations. What is significant is that they contain the same distortion of principle and the same misrepresentation of fact as those appearing in the Communist papers in Latin America.

A typical example begins: "Those who today defend the theory of nonintervention are the same ones who before intervened directly and without consulting other Latin-American states. I refer, of course, to Mr. Welles."

THE TRUTH is that from 1922, when I was sent by Secretary Hughes as commissioner to end the occupation of the Dominican Republic by the American Marines, I worked continuously, both in and out of the Government, for the adoption of an inter-American agreement providing for nonintervention. That agreement was finally concluded at the Buenos Aires conference of 1937.

The letter then says, "In May, 1933, Sumner Welles ordered President Gerardo Machado to resign."

When President Roosevelt was first inaugurated the Platt Amendment was still in force. The Cuban people were passing through a period of tragic distress. It was due in part to the bloody tyranny of the Machado dictatorship, and in part to the devastating economic collapse caused by the Smoot-Hawley tariff. Before the new Administration could start the first practical application of the Good Neighbor policy by economic cooperation, tariff revision and the abrogation of the Platt Amendment it was essential that the Cuban people end a political crisis that had plunged their country into chaos.

President Machado and all but one of the opposition leaders at length accepted the mediation I had offered as Ambassador for the purpose of finding within the framework of the Constitution some solution of the political deadlock. President Roosevelt simultaneously called in the Latin-American representatives in Washington for consultation and informed them that no form of intervention was contemplated.

The mediation had made considerable progress when, at the beginning of August, 1933, not the Ambassador of the United States, but the officers of the Cuban army, demanded and obtained President Machado's resignation.

THE NEXT FALSEHOOD is that I, as Ambassador, then had "Carlos Manuel de Cespedes appointed as President of Cuba." Dr. De Cespedes, the son of Cuba's great liberator, who had no political connection, was, on the contrary, chosen unanimously by the Cuban party leaders to serve as President until national elections could be held.

The letter then proceeds to denounce as "interventionist" a speech I delivered in Boston in 1942.

At their conference in Rio de Janeiro immediately after Pearl Harbor, the American republics jointly agreed, subject to their constitutional requirements, to break relations with the Axis. The postponement by Argentina and Chile of final action permitted Axis spies and saboteurs to continue operations in those countries. My speech emphasized the danger to the security of the hemisphere caused by a failure to comply with the provisions of an inter-American agreement to which all the American governments had voluntarily subscribed.

IN THE TISSUE of falsehoods and of distortion which this letter represents, the most insidious feature, however, is the charge that "a treaty negotiated by governments not representing the direct will of the people could not be considered valid."

That is, of course, the gist of the Communists' contention. To them no treaty is valid unless it serves their purposes.

It is governments that the Communists and fellow travelers hold to be representative of "the direct will of the people" that have been violating their treaty obligations by trying to overthrow neighboring governments they call "unrepresentative."

This effort to convince public opinion that black is white is peculiarly dangerous at a moment when military dictatorships have recently seized the governments of several republics. If the American peoples are persuaded by such propaganda to abandon their support for the principles in hemisphere relations that experience has shown to be indispensable to Pan-American solidarity, the military dictatorships are going to do just as much intervening as their opponents.

An initiative by the council of the Organization of American States to determine all violations by American governments of their nonintervention pledge would be the most effective means of counteracting the confusion caused by Communist propaganda, and of convincing the American peoples that respect for that commitment is essential to their common welfare.

Expert Shows 1500 How to Remember

By Charles E. Davis, Jr.
Post Reporter

There are at least 1500 improved memories in Washington today—thanks to a drawling personality pepperpot named Robert H. Nutt.

R. H. Nutt

He convincingly demonstrated to that number of persons last week at Lisner Auditorium that anyone can have a good memory, even a newspaper reporter.

Nutt, a Nawth Ca'lina boy who parlayed an idea into a high bracket income, can teach you how to remember names and faces and how to remember a series of unrelated facts.

Best evidence that the average person wants to possess a good memory was the turnout Monday and Tuesday nights in the Lisner "classroom." Every seat in the auditorium was filled and chairs were placed on the stage to accommodate the overflow.

And the fee for attending the two-night series was $10 a person—which adds up to a $15,000 house!

A prize fight should do so well.

Six Cardinal Rules

Nutt warned his students that his is a system that works—but it isn't perfect. The more it is used the smoother it becomes.

Nutt said there are six cardinal rules to observe in remembering names and faces:

1. Be interested in the name first—be interested in remembering it.

2. Pay attention to the name—get it right.

3. Observe closely the person you are meeting.

4. Associate the name with something else that sounds like the name, or rhyme the name with something else.

5. Analyze the name; break it into syllables if necessary.

6. Repeat the name two or three times during a conversation.

Nutt gave an illustration for point 1. He told about an assistant bank cashier, a friend of his. This fellow had trouble remembering names of customers who came into the bank. He was also nuts about baseball. He confided his troubles to Nutt.

"Now you follow baseball, don't you?" asked Nutt.

"Oh, yes," and the bank official's eyes brightened. "I can tell you the name of every player on the Washington club and what his batting average was last year."

"There's your answer," Nutt told him. "You're interested in baseball so you remember the names of the players. If you'll take the same interest in names in the bank, your worries are over."

The bank official's memory during working hours is now vastly improved, Nutt concluded.

Shock Is Clincher

Nutt holds to the shock theory in remembering names. If it's shocking enough, you'll remember it.

Take the name Bowkowski. Just picture in your mind, advised Nutt, yourself paying a courtly bow to a cow—a cow wearing skis, no less. Simple; Bow-cow-ski.

On the stage, the memory expert had an easel on which were 20 portraits, about 3 by 6 feet. He introduced each portrait by name.

The newspaper reporter alluded to earlier tried Nutt's advice on one of the portraits—the point about rhyming the name with something.

The man in the portrait was identified as Dr. Black. That was easy: Dr. Black is a quack.

One of the most useful things taught by Nutt is how to remember unrelated facts, or how to organize, as he puts it, a memory filing system.

We can't divulge how it works because that would ruin Brother Nutt's pitch. Suffice to say that it is amazingly simple and it works. You can learn the trick in less than five minutes, and after you know it it's simple to remember as many as 15 unrelated facts, and remember them in order.

Children Can Learn It

The system is so simple that even children can learn it. Nutt told about two young schoolboys who came to him and told him their teacher had ordered them to learn the 13 original States and the order in which they joined the Union.

As Nutt told it, these boys weren't up in the front of the class by any stretch of imagination. But he taught them his system and it was easy for them to memorize the States and the order in which they joined the Union.

"Well, sir," Nutt related, "a week later in school—the teacher had given the class a week to memorize the States—one of the unusually bright pupils was called on and made several mistakes.

"One of my boys volunteered and the teacher was stunned when he unreeled the States letter perfect.

"When he sat down, the other boy stuck up his hand. 'Teacher,' he said, 'I just want to let you know that I can call off that dogoned list backward, if you want.'"

Government officials, businessmen, salesmen and executives turned out to have a polish put on their memories. A large number of banks, hotels, stores and business firms bought blocks of tickets for their employes—a nice gesture at $10 per.

So enthusiastic was the response to Nutt's class that he had to organize a second one this week.

Army 'Freeze' Out; Officers to Rise

By John G. Norris
Post Reporter

The Army yesterday announced the lifting of its 20-month-old promotion "freeze" and said that 2732 officers will be selected for temporary advancement next month under a new promotion system.

Merit alone will govern the promotions, officials said, and the competition probably will be stiff. Unlike the wartime temporary advancement system, officers need not be occupying a job calling for a higher rank to be promoted.

Records Under Scrutiny

Under the new system, boards will review the records of the senior man in each grade and pick the best of them. If a company commander is deemed fitted for a majority and has the requisite time in grade, he'll be promoted and either be given another job in his regiment or be transferred if no major's billet is open. This will remove the chief fault of the wartime system.

Selections for temporary promotions to colonel, lieutenant colonel and major will be made by boards to be appointed by the Department of the Army. The major Army commands have been authorized to promote first lieutenants to captain within quotas to be set. Advancement to first lieutenant will continue as now.

Due to a surplus in the grades of colonel and lieutenant colonel, promotions in those ranks under the new system will be confined at present to doctors, dentists, veterinarians, medical service corps and chaplains.

Of the 2732 officers to be selected, a total of 1832 will be advanced immediately. The remainder will go on eligibility lists and will be promoted to fill vacancies occurring later.

45 Go Up at Once

A total of 68 Medical Department and Chaplain Corps lieutenant colonels will be chosen for promotion to colonel. Forty-five of them will be advanced immediately. The number of medical and chaplain majors to be advanced was set at 106, with another 53 going on the waiting list.

Throughout the Army, 561 captains will be picked for promotion to major, plus another 281 for the waiting list. A total of 1120 first lieutenants will be advanced to captain and another 560 chosen for the eligibility list.

To be considered for promotion to major, Regular Army captains must have had at least nine years service by the end of this month. Nonregular captains must have temporary dates of rank of December, 1942, or earlier. To be eligible for promotion to captain, Regular Army lieutenants must have had at least four years service on December 31, 1948. Nonregulars must have a date of rank prior to July 1, 1944.

Reversible Propellers Speed Landing

A four-engined military airplane yesterday dropped from 15,000 feet with its propellers pulling backward, to land at National Airport in about half the time it would take for a normal landing from that altitude.

It was the first demonstration over Washington of reversing the pitch of propeller blades in flight, and was witnessed by Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower, Air Chief of Staff Gen. Hoyt S. Vandenberg and some 200 other military and Government officials from the river entrance of the Pentagon Building.

A trail of smoke released by the pilot, Herbert O. Fisher, chief test pilot of the Curtiss-Wright Corp., propeller division, to make it easier to follow the plane's flight, caused numerous inquiries from citizens about the "burning plane."

Curtiss-Wright officials believe the new technique will be valuable in emergencies.

Bolling Wins Safety Trophy

With top Air Force brass from the Pentagon setting the pace, Bolling Air Base led all other USAF fields in flying safety last year, it was announced yesterday.

Maj. Gen. Hugh J. Knerr, USAF inspector general, will present the Order of Daedalians Trophy—commenorative of the feat—to Bolling at a formal review at 4:15 p. m. today. The public is invited.

Headquarters Command, USAF, at Bolling, had the best safety record of all Air Force units during the fiscal year, 1948, with a total of 117,037 flying hours and only 28 major or minor accidents.

Brig. Gen. B. M. Hovey will accept the silver cup from Knerr at a farewell review in his honor and then turn over the command and trophy to his successor, Col. Sydney D. Grubbs.

The command consists of all pilots at the Pentagon from USAF Chief of Staff Gen. Hoyt S. Vandenberg down. They were assigned to Bolling for actual flying duty.

The Daedalians Trophy was presented to the Air Force in 1937 by a group of 300 World War I pilots. It is named for the Greek God Daedalus, father of Icarus. According to mythology, Daedalus designed wax wings for himself and Icarus, and the two escaped from prison by air. Icarus, however, flew too close to the sun and his wings melted and fell off.

Air Force officials said the safety trophy had not been awarded since 1940 because of tthe war.

U. S. Airlines Near Record Safety Marks

By The Associated Press

Barring a bad crash in the next three weeks, American aviation will chalk up one of its safest years on record.

Domestic trunk lines look to a safety mark of 1.4 passenger fatalities for every 100,000,000 passenger-miles, compared with 3.2 in 1947. The lowest rate ever achieved was 1.2 deaths in 1939 and again in 1946.

Passenger-miles represent the total distance traveled by all passengers.

American-owned international airlines are headed for a passenger fatality rate even lower—one death per 100,000,000 passenger miles, compared with about 1.2 last year.

The Nation's feeder, or local service, airlines and the territorial airlines have gone through nearly 350 days of the year without a passenger death. Their traffic volume, however, constitutes only about 2 per cent of the total domestic air travel.

Thus far in 1948 the domestic airlines have had four accidents in which 83 passengers died. There was a fifth mishap in which a plane steward was killed by a piece of propeller. In the four crashes fatal to passengers, 13 crew members died, bringing the total of deaths to 97.

Five accidents in 1947 took the lives of 199 pessengers and 17 crewmen, for total fatalities more than twice as great as in any previous year.

International carriers thus far have had two accidents fatal to 46 passengers and 16 crewmen, but one of those—involving 32 deaths—was a charter operation outside regular schedule. The overseas operators had three accidents with 33 deaths in scheduled flights in 1947.

SEE THE 1949
Cadillac
Performance That Challenges the Imagination!

The big Cadillac story for 1949 is performance—a story written by the great new Cadillac engine. Here are standards of power, smoothness and responsive acceleration never before available in an automotive power plant. ★ The 1949 Cadillac engine is a completely new V-type, eight-cylinder creation, even more powerful than its famed predecessor. It is liquid smooth; it is so effortless that the driver is scarcely aware of its existence; it is remarkably responsive; and yet it affords an increase in gasoline economy of about twenty per cent. ★ It is not likely that the average owner will ever extend this great engine to its ultimate. But, from the very first mile, he will experience performance which actually challenges the imagination. In its eagerness, its quickness, its ease of handling, and in its general maneuverability—the new Cadillac is superb. And back of it all is the matchless resourcefulness of the new engine. ★ We think that this year, more than ever before, Cadillac superiority is something you should measure for yourself. You will be cordially welcomed in our showrooms at any time.

West Allies' Rule Urged for Berlin

Berlin, Dec. 13 (AP).—Western Berlin's new mayor, Ernst Reuter, proposed today that the western Allies reorganize the Allied Kommandatura without the Russians and abolish the boundaries between the American, British and French sectors of the city.

He received a favorable response to the proposal to revive the Kommandatura. The old four-power body set up to rule Berlin disintegrated last summer when the Russians walked out.

Since then the three western military governors have met occasionally but they have avoided the Kommandatura building. They will meet again Tuesday and a spokesman said this time they may hold their session in the building.

A United States Military Government source said it was "highly possible" Tuesday's conference will be devoted to organizing three-power rule.

"The way it is now," he said, "the three governors send the same orders to the German officials on three separate sheets of paper."

Reuter, leader of the Social Democrats, became mayor as a result of his party's triumph in the December 5 election. His authority extends only over the three western sectors. A separate Communist-backed rump government has been established in the Soviet area.

The Russians have made it clear that the Soviet sector of Berlin is being integrated into the Soviet occupation zone.

[The United Press, quoting the Soviet news bureau, reported that tough blockade director Maj. Gen. Alexander Kotigov has been ill with a heart ailment. The report said Kotigov was still in Berlin and would resume his job as soon as his health permitted—Editor's note.]

British Book Says

Red Rockets May Have New Range

London, Dec. 13 (AP).—The editor of Britain's new Aircraft Annual said today Soviet scientists may have built vastly increased range into a new version of the German V-2 rockets which fell on London.

John W. R. Taylor, well-known aviation writer, said, "Norwegian airline pilots have seen and timed moving objects believed to be Russian rocket weapons, flying over Scandinavia.

"Of great significance is that these rockets seem to follow the curvature of the earth instead of climbing to great height and then falling back like V-2. If the Russians have produced a missile which can do this, they will have solved the problem of V-2's short range."

The German V-2 rocket had a range of 200 to 250 miles. It went into the air about 60 to 65 miles.

Taylor also wrote that Russian aircraft designers have made "tremendous technical advances since V-J Day."

As a result, he said, "squadrons of powerful modern jet bombers and fighters are already in service with the Red air fleet, as well as four-motored bombers based on 'captured' examples of the American B-29 Superfortress."

King George Progressing

London, Dec. 13 (U.P.).—King George will be unable to accept public engagements before summer, a bulletin by six attending physicians and surgeons said today.

The King also will be unable to leave Buckingham Palace and spend the Christmas holidays at his country estate at Sandringham.

But, the bulletin said, he had made substantial improvement and might be able to go to the country early in the new year to "continue his convalescence."

The King, suffering from an arterial obstruction in his legs, is in excellent spirits and is now allowed up for a short time each day, other sources said.

Tuesday is the King's fifty-third birthday and it is expected there will be a quiet palace celebration.

It is hoped he will be able to attend the christening of his first grandchild, Princess Elizabeth's son, in Buckingham Palace at 3:30 p. m. Wednesday. The King also intends to make his Christmas broadcast to the British Commonwealth at 2:30 p. m. December 25.

AMG Official Retires

Berlin, Dec. 13 (AP).—Dr. J. B. Canning of Menlo Park, Calif., has retired as assistant chief of the United States Military Government's food and agriculture branch. Ill health was given as the reason.

International Tension Eased by U. N. Session, Evatt Holds

Paris, Dec. 13—(AP).—Dr Herbert V. Evatt, president of the United Nations Assembly, said tonight international tension has eased as a result of the Assembly session which ended yesterday.

"The temperature is not yet normal," the Australian Foreign Minister told newsmen, "but the fever has abated."

Evatt gave his views as delegates dispersed for their home countries after the 12-weeks meeting. Only representatives of the 11 Security Council members remained here for further meetings.

The Security Council was handed a red-hot issue today when the American-sponsored Republic of Korea applied for U.N. membership.

The Assembly voted its approval of the new government of southern Korea just before it adjourned. The vote was 48 to 6, with the Russian bloc alone opposing it.

Russia is expected to oppose—and probably veto—the Republic's membership application.

The Council meets Wednesday to discuss membership applications of Israel and Ceylon and to consider the question of Hyderabad's seizure by India. There was no indication when Korea's application might come up.

Evatt expressed belief that the continuance of the Assembly in New York, instead of adjourning until next fall, will "be a further safeguard against big-power differences drifting into war."

"It is certain," he said, "that the peoples of the world don't want war, and the United Nations with all its limitations is the best, if not the only, means of assisting positively in the drive toward the making of peace in relation to Germany and Austria.

"And it would be a tremendous mistake to neglect the Far East and the Pacific where the present crisis is so acute.

"The General Assembly has had some outstanding successes in this session on the economic side and any failure to reach satisfactory decisions on political issues has been due almost exclusively to great power disputes and disputations."

U. N. Assembly Debate Cost 53 Cents a Word

Paris, Dec. 13 (AP).—The newspaper France Soir figured out today that each word spoken at the just-ended session of the United Nations Assembly cost 53 cents.

France Soir's figures: Total oratory—10 million words; total expenses—1,700,000,000 francs; per word—170 francs, or 53 cents.

Girl Found In Guam Jungle Dies

RUTH FARNSWORTH
Dies After Kidnap Ordeal

Pearl Harbor, Dec. 13 (AP).—Ruth Farnsworth, 27-year-old San Francisco beauty who was brutally beaten Saturday night on Guam, died today, the Navy reported.

The Navy said a few servicemen had been questioned but that no one was held.

Miss Farnsworth died in a military hospital at 12:10 a. m. Guam time (9 a. m. EST), 12 hours after she was found unconscious and partly clad in the jungle.

Searchers came across the girl about 200 yards from a small curio shop where she worked part time.

She had been missing since Saturday.

Reports from Guam said she had been raped, but Pacific Fleet headquarters said its Guam call disclosed no examination for rape had yet been made.

Rear Admiral Leon Fiske, deputy governor of Guam, has asked all military commanders to check their personnel for cuts and bruises.

The curio shop's littered condition and the scene where Miss Farnsworth was found indicated she had struggled fiercely.

Search for Miss Farnsworth's missing sandal was intensified. One sandal was found near the gift shop alongside tire tracks which authorities hoped might provide a clew.

Her employer in the curio shop offered a $1000 reward for apprehension of her attackers.

She was last seen in the shop about 8 p.m. Saturday and was found after an extensive search by soldiers and Guam police.

San Jose, Costa Rica, Dec. 13 (U.P.).—Four unidentified men were killed today by a military patrol in Costa Rica's eastern foothills—the first announced casualties of the three-day-old invasion.

The men were killed in a skirmish between Costa Rican soldiers and members of a "suspicious" band near Guapiles, 55 miles northwest of the Atlantic port of Limon and more than 100 miles southeast of the La Cruz-Liberia area, reportedly invaded late Friday from Nicaragua.

Strict censorship still veiled activities on the invasion front, but the Costa Rican legation in Guatemala City said Costa Rica's hastily reactivated army was still holding the invaders in the postions they occupied Friday and early Saturday.

The "war cabinet" of provisional President Jose Figueres was believed to be massing forces for a counterattack intended to push the attackers back across the border.

The invaders are ostensibly Costa Rican supporters of former President Teodoro Picado, ousted by Figueres last spring after a five-week civil war.

Figueres claims, however, that Costa Ricans in the attacking force are merely a "front" for soldiers of the Nicaraguan national guard.

The Nicaraguan foreign office issued a "formal and energetic" denial of the Costa Rican charge today, claiming not only that no Nicaraguans were involved in the fighting but that strong "measures had been taken to prevent any person of any nationality from crossing (Nicaragua's) southern frontier."

The Nicaraguan government demanded an apoligy for the "grave accusation."

Costa Rica Wants Air Patrol Set Up

By the United Press

Costa Rica wants an international air patrol set up to see that no "invaders" cross its borders from Nicaragua, it was revealed last night.

Costa Rican Ambassador Mario Esquivel said his country will make that request when the council of the Organization of American States meets here Tuesday on the Costa Rican appeal.

State Department officials said yesterday they have received no information to date to support Costa Rica's charges that Nicaraguan troops are engaged in the "invasion."

Marshall and Austin On Mend After Surgery

Secretary of State Marshall, who underwent a kidney operation last week, was reported yesterday to be "getting on splendidly" at Walter Reed Hospital.

Michael J. McDermott, State Department press officer, reported he made good progress toward recovery over the weekend. McDermott declined to say at a news conference whether this meant that Marshall might return soon to his desk.

Ambassador Warren R. Austin, United States delegate to the United Nations, also is recovering rapidly from an operation at Walter Reed Hospital and will be out soon, McDermott added.

Some Top Aides

14 Arrested In Argentine Fraud Case

Buenos Aires, Dec. 13 (AP).—Police disclosed today that 14 persons, including trusted aides of President Juan D. Peron, have been arrested in connection with a government fraud.

The amount involved may exceed 11 million pesos ($2,100,000). Investigating Federal Judge Oscar Palma Baltran said this amount had been obtained as a loan and transferred to Italy for purchases of an aluminum plant which was found to be nonexistent.

The judge did not say whether this was the only transaction involved, but he said 12 million pesos worth of property had been embargoed to cover the loss.

The secret investigation started November 12 after Peron had become suspicious of two of his aides.

Judge Palma Baltran said those under arrest included Herminio Antonio Fassio, federal police inspector in charge of the presidential bodyguard. Fassio a few months ago was awarded the top Peronista medal for loyalty.

Among others arrested were Lieut. Col. Juan Carlos Basso, coordinator of the five-year plan in the president's office, and Horacio Colombo Ramallo, vice president of the Banco Credito Industrial.

Judge Palma Baltran said the alleged fraud had been planned by three Italians who had 3,200,000 pesos ($640,000) for use as bribes. One of the Italians was arrested.

Greeks Repulse Rebels From Karditsa in Fierce Clash

Athens, Dec. 13 (AP).—Hastily reinforced Greek army troops recaptured Karditsa today in a violent engagement with Communist guerillas who suddenly opened a new battle area 100 miles south of the Yugoslav border, a general staff spokesman said.

Greek infantry repulsed the rebel force of 2500 to 3000 men after tanks and armored cars shattered barricades in the heart of the city. Karditsa is 135 miles northwest of Athens.

Fifth columnists were reported to have prepared the way for the guerilla attack, launched early yesterday. Apparently, the rebels did not come from Greece' northern border areas—scene of most of the recent fighting in the civil war—but from hideouts on nearby Mount Agrafa.

Tass, the Soviet news agency, said in Moscow today the Greek "Democratic Army" (the guerilla force) again holds heights around Mount Gammos and has recaptured many villages in northern Greece.

U. S. Envoy Is Hopeful On Situation in Greece

Ambassador Henry F. Grady said here yesterday there is a "good chance for a decided improvement" in the situation in Greece by next summer.

The military outlook is "better than it looks," he declared, despite the failure of the American-advised Greek army to crush the Communist guerillas this year.

Grady, in the capital for consultations, said the army now is changing tactics to fight the rebels more effectively, and is putting new emphasis on the use of highly trained commando forces.

Talking with reporters at the State Department, the Ambassador declined to predict what the Administration will ask of Congress in way of aid to Greece. But he is convinced substantial military and economic help must be continued as part of the global East-West struggle.

"Through the Economic Cooperation Administration, we are working on a four-year program," Grady said. "I think at the end of four years there will be stability and security in Greece which we went in there to help provide."

The United States has supplied or committed to Greece in less than two years 500 million dollars or more in economic and military assistance.

You bet you can have Dynaflow on the Super!

LOOK this eye-filling smoothie over — and make note of the happy news:

It's the Buick SUPER for 1949 — and you can have it in any of four body types, with that sensational engineering triumph, Dynaflow Drive.†

Now this sprightly stepper, too, has the drive in which oil does it all — as the climax of a long list of fresh features that make this the smashing buy of the season.

There's room, for instance — from gracious interiors where even the super-soft seats add space for hats and hairdos.

There's a view — and what a view! — from big, broad, full-curved windshields, narrower corner posts, one-piece rear windows — 22% more glass area in 4-door Sedans.

There are doors that swing wider and with less effort — there are fine fabrics, rich fittings, interiors that sparkle with thoughtful touches.

And there's the soft sure-footedness of low-pressure tires. The extra safety and comfort of extra-wide rims. The fluent stride of all-coil springing — silky engine smoothness from Buick's exclusive Hi-Poised engine mountings.

A smoothie? This SUPER certainly is. On every score from its boldly fashioned grille to smoothly streamlined taillights and graceful, contoured bumpers.

Even the price tags are something to get excited about. Just look them over — see what they cover — match them against the field — and you'll head straight for the nearest Buick dealer to get your order in!

†Standard on ROADMASTER, optional at extra cost on SUPER models.

BUICK alone has all these features

*Silk-smooth DYNAFLOW DRIVE
FULL-VIEW VISION from enlarged glass area
SWING-EASY DOORS and easy access
"LIVING SPACE" INTERIORS with Deep-Cradle cushions
Buoyant-riding QUADRUFLEX COIL SPRINGING
Lively FIREBALL STRAIGHT-EIGHT POWER on HI-POISED ENGINE MOUNTINGS • Cruiser-Line VENTIPORTS (Super and Roadmaster) • Low-pressure tires on SAFETY-RIDE RIMS • DUREX BEARINGS, main and connecting rods
Ten smart models featuring BODY BY FISHER

*Standard on ROADMASTER, optional at extra cost on SUPER models.

Oil does it all in DYNAFLOW DRIVE

There's no clutch pedal in Dynaflow Drive. And no gears that shift. Instead, the engine makes all whirl in this drive. And it whirls in such a unique and special way that whatever kind of power you need — for starting, climbing, accelerating, cruising — is instantly delivered to the rear wheels. You just set a lever, press the gas treadle — and the power plant does the rest.

Comedy Tidbits Brighten 'Stem'

By Richard L. Coe

BROADWAY IS OFFERING some highly comical moments these nights. Here are some which may amuse you on your next trip up—if you plot things carefully.

Any girl who's ever been a secretary will particularly enjoy Shirley Booth as Congresswoman Madeleine Carrol's indispensable aide in "Goodby, My Fancy." This is Fay Kanin's comedy, at the Morosco, about a colorful lady who went through journalism into the halls of Congress and goes back to her old college for an honorary degree. Miss Carroll is now the toast of Broadway and of her you know a good deal.

But Miss Booth's secretary is a really wonderful creation. She's worked to death, smoothing the elegant passage of her chic employer through the busy ways of public life. Miss Booth makes Secretary Woods the epitome of bland exhaustion. She effects an ill-fitting business suit, can just about drag her feet across a room and yet manages to give you the impression she'll stick to her job. In Mrs. Kanin's script, I don't suppose the role looked as though it had all the bitter juice Miss Booth gives it, but in the hands of the lady who created "Ruth" in "My Sister Eileen," it affords a chuckle every time Miss Booth is on stage.

"Light Up the Sky," the Moss Hart comedy at the Royale, bristles with hard-boiled comic moments. Hart is telling of a play's tryout opening in Boston. The first act finds cast, relatives and author joyfully hopeful before the first performance. Act II reveals everyone at each other's throats following what seems to have been a disastrous first night. Act III brings in the critical notices that the author is a new and welcome voice in the theater, which pulls everyone happily together again.

Though I was disappointed in Hart's comedy, finding the situations and characters familiar from his and other's past hits, the playing is absolutely top-drawer.

Phyllis Povah has a grand scene as the star's mother, a lady kept by a happily neurotic director from attending the dress rehearsal. The lady, however, disguised herself as a cleaning woman and watched the affair from the balcony, supposedly unseen. But the director, Glenn Anders, did see what he describes as a pathetic old crone weeping silently in the darkened theater, and Miss Povah's reactions on stage left as he describes this harridan at stage center are wonderful to watch. Simply by crosing her legs and writhing over the gin rummy game she's playing with Audrey Christie, Miss Povah creates unforgettably comic moments.

Miss Christie has a brash, cynical part that recalls her Olive Lashbrooke in "The Voice of the Turtle." Playing the wife of the producer and a highly paid skater, part of whose savings has gone into what looks like disaster, Miss Christie has a swell scene where she explains that even to close a show costs money. The scenery, she points out, has to be carted away and someone paid to burn it. This is the role the gossip world assigns to Eleanor Holm Rose, whose husband, Billy, is supposedly caricatured in the producer role played by Sam Levene. I understand the play has been considerably toned down since its Philadelphia opening and that all is now sweetness and light between the Hart and Rose families.

Three other people who are bound to give you laughs are found in the intimate revue, "Small Wonder," at the Coronet. There are at least three riotously funny sketches in this one and there's a neatly humorous idea to tie the show together.

Tom Ewell plays "The Normal Neurotic," an average man who's upset by some of the aspects of insanity fair. He explains, for instance, what may happen should the soap opera technique be applied to the "Voice of America" selling "D-E-M-Ocracy" abroad. Alace Pearce, a madly bewildered lass with no lower chin to speak of, is seen listening to the radio beams from America as she tramples grapes in middle Europe. She ceases her noisy tramping only when the lurid, romantic story in on; as soon as the commercial about "D-E-M-Ocracy" is unleashed, she's back at her grapes.

Ewell makes high sport of the ads you find in the mass magazines, but to a constant moviegoer he's having the most fun in "The Happy Ending," wherein he explains how the same story would be handled by the Russian, British and American studios. The first is doleful and tragic. The second is underdone in "Brief Encounter" style. The third is played in front of the most nauseating array of colors ever a Technicolor camera photographed, and Mary McCarty acts a typical Hollywood heroine in the flattest, drabbest voice imaginable. Miss McCarty also makes sport of the Texas new rich in "Ballad for Billionaires" and is hilarious as a teen-ager who wishes she'd lived in the days of Clara Bow and the flappers. A virtual newcomer to the Broadway scene, dark, energy-chocked Mary is the musical comedy discovery of the season.

Those three shows have other things to recommend them—particularly Gower Champion's scintillating dances for "Small Wonder." But those tidbits are what make a man who likes to laugh happy on Broadway these nights.

GENE FORD'S death has shocked Washington theater circles. The generosity of the patient, likable man is impossible to evaluate, for he gave so freely of his time and energies. Fifty-three is an early age to pas away. Being manager of the Capitol Theater took only part of his energy. For his annual "Going Native" revues, I've known him to sit up auditioning young performers night after night, often playing piano accompaniments for those who had none for themselves. In the endless chain of civic and national drives which Washington theater people constantly are called on to organize, Gene never gave no for an answer. Theater attendants and headliners alike had a unique affection for the smiling Irishman who'd been dancer, singer, performer, manager and factotum in a career that began with Charles B. Dillingham over 30 years ago. To Mrs. Ford, his son and daughter, this writer extends his heartfelt sympathy. Gene will be sorely missed by us all.

Arnall Hits Big Movie Firms On Monopolistic Practices

Hollywood, Dec. 13 (AP)—Georgia's former Governor, Ellis Arnall, took over his job as head of independent movie makers today with a promise to "hit and hit again monopolistic practices of the big film companies."

Arnall

Arnall declared he doubts seriously if he can work with Eric Johnston, chief of the big studio association — "if he continues his theory of limited and controlled theater outlets."

The 41-year-old former Governor said the Truman Administration is committed to a "relentless wa. on monopoly," which should help independent producers.

Need More Theaters

"The problem is that good merchandise can't find enough picture houses," he said.

"The people don't know why motion pictures do not maintain high quality. I intend to tell them it is because of restrictive practices. The big companies operate under an economy of inferior art. If the motion picture industry continues to shake down people with inferior entertainment it will dry up like a vine."

Arnall said he was thinking of challenging Johnston to a radio debate on the issues between independent and big producers.

To Curb Stars

Concerning stars who make sensational headlines, he declared "anyone who is a perpetual drunk or is constantly embroiled with the law should be banished from the business."

Arnall said he would continue with his law firm, insurance company and lecture tours but would spend much of his time in Hollywood, New York and Washington on business for the Society of Independent Motion Picture Producers. Concerning Washington he said he would not lobby, but commented: "Every American is a potential lobbyist."

Bar Unit Enters Playground Row

The Wahington Bar Association has asked the Justice Department to rule in favor of the Interior Department, and against the District Recreation Department, in the jurisdictional quarrel centering about the city's segregated playground facilities.

Maurice R. Weeks, president of the Association of Negro Attorneys, said yesterday a letter had been sent to Solicitor General Philip B. Perlman by the association's executive committee urging support of the Interior Department in the fight.

Interior Department Solicitor Martin G. White maintains that the 62 District playgrounds are under jurisdiction of the Interior Department's National Park Service, which has merely agreed to let the District Recreation Department administer the areas.

The Park Service does not segregate play areas it controls.

The District Recreation Board and the National Capital Park and Planning Commission, which is both a Federal and a District agency, maintains the playgrounds are entirely under District control.

Legionnaires to Hear War Trial Prosecutor

John W. Fihelly, Assistant United States District Attorney for the District of Columbia and an assistant prosecutor of Japanese war criminals, will relate some of his experiences in Japan at a meeting tonight of the George E. Killeen American Legion Post No. 9 at 8:30 o'clock in the Legion Hall, 3204 M st. nw.

Dining Places' Gross Here Put At 228 Million

By S. Oliver Goodman

Catering to the "eating-out" public is a 228-million-dollar-a-year business in the Washington area.

Wilson

This estimate is based on figures supplied yesterday by Robert J. Wilson, executive secretary of the Washington Restaurant Association. Wilson declared there are about 2500 eating places in Washington and the nearby Maryland and Virginia counties.

These places, ranging from small dining cars to the more elaborate downtown establishments, serve approximately 1,250,000 meals a day. The average meal check is estimated at 50 cents.

Most recent Census Bureau figures indicate that gross volume of Washington eating places in the first 10 months of 1948 was off 1 per cent in October, but unchanged for the first 10 months this year as compared with the like 1947 periods.

One of the largest private employers in this area, the restaurant industry provides about 40,000 jobs, Wilson said.

Although gross volume is holding near-record levels, net profits of eating places are showing a lower trend. Wilson attributed this to the fact that "meal prices have not risen in proportion to the increase in wholesale food prices and the sharp climb in payrolls and other expenses."

Looking ahead, Wilson forecast an increase in dollar volume for 1949. He pointed out that Washington again is becoming the world's mecca for tourists.

On the problems of the industry, he saw the need for even greater efficiency in operations and progressive ideas. Training classes for management and employers, sponsored by the Washington Restaurant Association, are part of the effort to keep the industry up-to-date on new operating methods.

ELECTED CHAIRMAN: Maj. Gen. Oliver P. Echols, United States Air Force (retired), will become chairman of the board of Northrop Aircraft, Inc., on February 1, succeeding Richard W. Millar. For the last two years General Echols has been serving in Washington as president of the Aircraft Industries Association. He will continue in that post until a successor is chosen. Prior to joining AIA, Echols was director of the Civil Affairs Division of the War Department. A native of Charlottesville, Echols studied at Virginia Polytechnic Institute and was graduated from the University of Virginia in 1913.

Gen. Echols

CUTS TAX RATE: Baltimore has reduced its tax rate for next year to $2.78 for each $100 of property valuation. This is a decrease of seven cents per $100 from the 1948 figure and the lowest tax rate since 1943. Then it was $2.65. The rate cut has been possible because of a $157,999,000 increase in the city's taxable basis and increases in various sources of revenue.

WHO'S WHO TODAY: Luther C. Dapp, for 11 years assistant manager in the Prudential Insurance Co.'s Washington district office No. 1, has been appointed manager of the company's district office in Nashville, Tenn. . . . King Whitney, executive director of the Personnel Laboratory of New York City, will address Washington Chapter of National Office Management at dinner meeting tonight in Dodge Hotel . . . John L. Leban is the new president, Schenley Distillers, Inc., subsidiary of Schenley Industries, Inc. . . . Earl D. McConnell has been appointed director of industrial relations for Gruen Watch Co. . . . E. H. Walker, general manager of Shell Oil Co.'s personnel and industrial relations division, has been appointed a vice president . . . Frederick H. Kingsbury, jr., will become a general partner of Brown Brothers Harriman & Co., on January 1.

FURNITURE: October sales of six Washington furniture stores edged 3 per cent higher than in the same 1947 month, the Federal Reserve Bank of Richmond noted yesterday. For the first 10 months this year, furniture sales here were reported 5 per cent greater than in the like 1947 period. Regionally, furniture sales dipped 4 per cent in October but were 6 per cent higher for the first 10 months. The Fifth Reserve District figures are based on reports from 62 stores.

ODD LOTS: Improved salesmanship was advocated for the securities business by Harold L. Bache, head of Bache & Co., at a conference of the investment firm's executives and personnel. . . . Federated Department Stores, has acquired the eight-million-dollar Boston store of Milwaukee. . . . Six major oil companies have set aside 183 million dollars for expansion in the Philadelphia port area during the coming year. . . . The steel industry will maintain its high level of operations this week at 100 per cent of rated capacity, the American Iron and Steel Institute reported yesterday.

Commodity Index

New York, Dec. 13.—The Associated Press weighted wholesale price index of 35 commodities today dropped to 177.77 (new 1946 low); previous day, 177.8; week ago, 179.50; month ago, 178.91; year ago, 205.25.

Yankees Buy Sanford From Browns for $100,000

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

CHICAGO, DEC. 13.—Those television sets that were bought with the view of bringing in the baseball games next summer are a sound investment despite the hue and cry over video as the saboteur of gate receipts.

They're debating it in the major league meetings here this week, but the threat that television will be legislated out of the majors is an empty one. There's no machinery by which even a majority of the club owners can tell Club A or Club B to cancel its television contracts.

POVICH

The Yankees, for example, won't hold still for any attempt to void their profitable video contracts. Their revenue is too great, even though the Yankees concede that television of big league games has blacked out attendance at such as their minor league farm team at Newark. The Yankees' solution to that latter problem has been to put the Newark club up for sale.

Television apparently is here to stay despite the anguished howls of the minor leagues, who have the justifiable squawk that their own live productions can't compete with the magnet of major league television.

CONSIDER THE YANKEES' position. It's one from which they could not retreat practically, or perhaps legally, even if they were of a mind to.

They've contracted for the sale of their television rights for the next four years, through 1952, and no action that might be taken by the major leagues as a whole can upset those contracts.

The Yankees' deal for next season brings them $300,000 in operating income from the sale of television rights. The Yankees themselves have bought the television time from Du Mont for $100,000 and have sold the privileges to the Ballantyne Ale people, with a neat $200,000 profit to the club. On that basis, they can stand some losses at Newark, and better still, dispose of that club.

The displeasure of the minor leagues didn't stop the Yankees from proceeding with their television contracts. Clark Griffith gave some lip service to the argument that video would hurt the minors, but he also went right along with a contract for television next season. They're not going to back down easily.

OF BUCKY HARRIS, it can be said he has been dumped out of many a baseball job, but he has always landed on his feet. Right now Bill Veeck, boss of the Cleveland Indians, who has succored many another former league manager, is attempting to interest Harris in taking over the reins of the San Diego club of the Pacific Coast League, with which Cleveland has a working agreement.

Veeck is a kind of snug harbor for displaced major league managers. On his own Cleveland club, he has hired three of them, Bill McKechine, Steve O'Neill and Muddy Ruel, as coaches. Now he wants Harris in San Diego, and not at a pittance, either. Harris' salary on the coast would be $15,000.

Harris hasn't agreed to take the job. The minors are still a bit distasteful to a man who won pennants and World Series for Washington and the Yankees. He can join the Washington organization as a super-scout, and is weighing that against Veeck's offer . . . "If I do go back to the minors," he says, "it won't be with the idea of making a career of it. Baseball's only charm for me is the big leagues."

TED LYONS is haunting the lobbies looking for employment, as the lately-displaced manager of the White Sox. But he's not thinking of making a comeback as a manager at this time. He wants to pitch some more and views himself as an asset to any club that needs a relief hurler, with control.

Lyons' control was never better demonstrated than one day at Yankee Stadium where he was piqued at Bill Dickey, Yankee catcher. Dickey was giving Lyons a hard time of it with his razzing every time Lyons came to bat.

"Stay loose yourself the next time to get to bat, Dickey," said Lyons, "because I'm gonna dig you with a fast ball right on the elbow you keep sticking over the plate."

And that's what happened. Lyons cracked Dickey on the elbow with his first pitch.

Dickey didn't even deign to rub the elbow. He threw away his bat, jogged toward first base, and taunted Lyons with, "you're fast ball couldn't break an egg shell."

But when Dickey reached first, he fainted dead away. Out of the game three weeks with a cracked elbow.

Television Ban Proposal Is Rejected By Majors

Chicago, Dec. 13 (AP).—The major leagues today turned thumbs down on minor league proposal to ban television and radio network broadcasts of baseball games.

Taking up the amendment to the major-minor agreement passed last week at the minor league convention in Minneapolis, the National League voted outright rejection. The American Leaguers merely tabled the matter until some obscure future date.

It had been a foregone conclusion that the majors would not permit the minors to set up rules by which their broadcasts and telecasts would be regulated.

Truman May Appear

According to the minor league idea, no broadcasts or telecasts would have been permitted by any station outside a club's "home territory." That "home territory" was to mean that the radio or television transmitter must be located within a 50-mile circle, having its center at the park.

It was reported that George Trautman, president of the National Association of Minor Leagues, would appear at Wednesday's joint session to ask further major league study on the television problem.

While the majors were going through such routine motions as reelecting vice presidents and naming boards of directors, chief lobby speculation centered on the Leo Durocher-Freddy Fitzsimmons hearing scheduled before Commissioner A. B. Chandler tomorrow.

Durocher said today that he would be able to answer only two questions at the investigation of the Giant's signing of Fitzsimmons as a coach while he still was on the Boston Braves' reserve list.

"The first time I talked to Fitzsimmons about the subject was our last trip to Boston," said Durocher, New York Giants manager. "Fitz said to me 'are you going to make any coaching changes?' I said 'Yes.'

"Then Fitz said 'will you consider me?' Again I told him 'yes.' That was all there was to it."

"Then sometime after the World Series I got a call in California from Fitz and he asked me how things were about the coaching job.

"I asked him how much he got in Boston. When he told me I said 'okay' on the same for New York. That is all I know about it. They can ask me a thousand questions but those are the only answers I can give."

UCLA Grid Coach, All His Aides Resign

Los Angeles, Dec. 13 (AP).—Head Football Coach Bert La Brucherie of the University of California at Los Angeles resigned today with his entire coaching staff.

Acceptance of the resignation of La Brucherie, W. P. Fehring, line coach; Shelby Calhoun, end coach, and Ned Mathews, backfield coach, was announced tonight by Bill Keene, chairman of the board of control of the Associated Students of UCLA.

La Brucherie went to UCLA from Los Angeles high school coaching berth in 1945. After a record of five wins and four losses that season, he led the Bruins to a Pacific Coast Conference championship with 10 straight wins in 1946 and into the Rose Bowl, where they were defeated by Illinois, 45-14.

Next season his team won only five games and lost four, and during the past season the Bruins had only three victories to seven defeats.

La Brucherie has been under spasmodic fire, principally from Los Angeles sports writers, since UCLA's Rose Bowl defeat.

He said in a statement tonight: "I hope the alumni will get behind my successor and help him build football up to the high place it deserves at UCLA. It is my alma mater and I am as much interested in its future success as I have always been."

La Brucherie's contract with UCLA had two more years to run. University officials said a financial settlement was made with him but the terms of it were not disclosed. His salary was reported to be $11,000 or $12,000 a year.

Two months ago rumors were afloat that Paul Brown, coach of the professional Cleveland Browns of the All American Conference, might come to UCLA.

'Sold Myself Too Cheap Last Time'

Louis Demands $250,000 for Video, Radio Rights for Fight Next June

Philadelphia, Dec. 13 (AP).—Joe Louis said today he will demand $250,000 from television and radio rights when he defends his heavyweight title next June in New York.

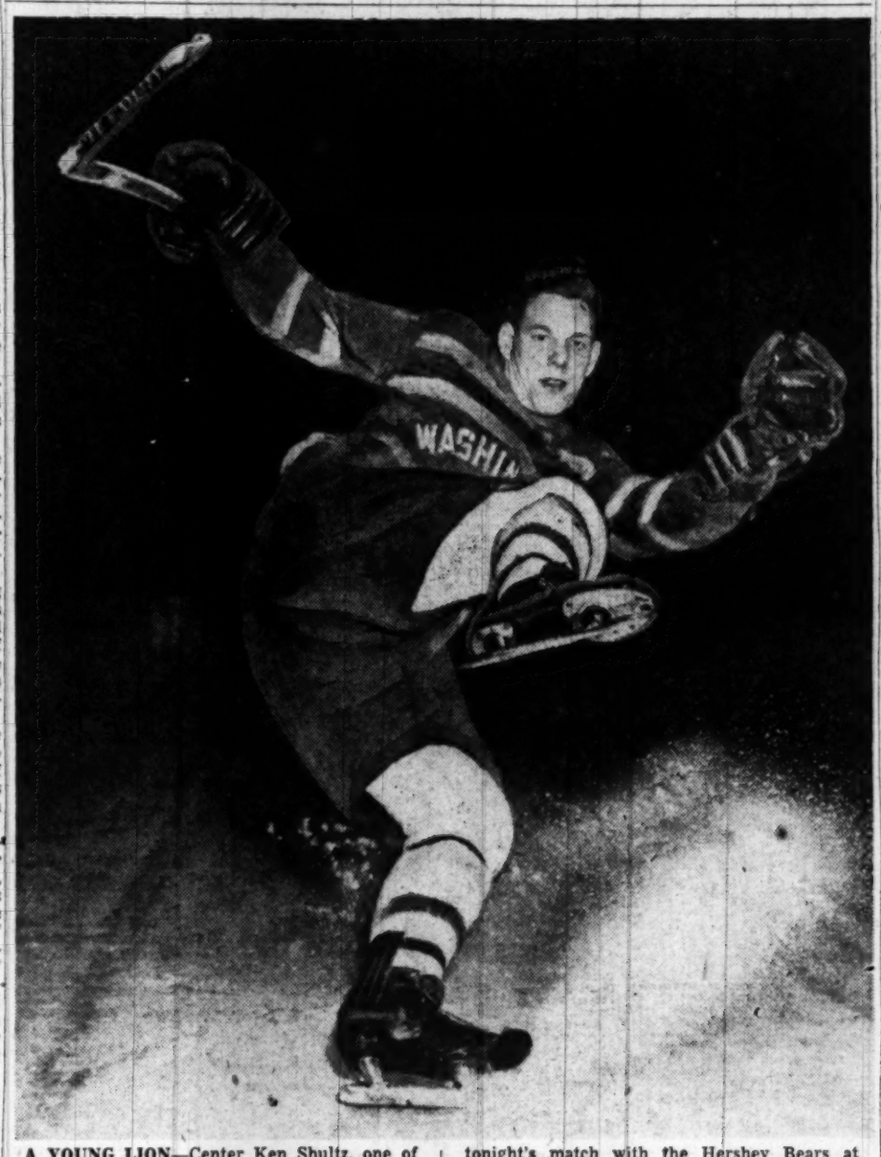
"I sold myself too cheap in my last fight with Joe Walcott," the champion told a reporter. My end from the television and radio was $40,000. But it's going to be a lot more the next time."

Louis is in Philadelphia for a six-round exhibition bout tomorrow night at Convention Hall with Arturo Godoy of Chile.

The television-radio fee for the Louis-Walcott bout last June 25 was $100,000. The Brown Bomber received $40,000 or 40 per cent, Walcott 22½ per cent.

Louis said today Ezzard Charles is the top contender for a crack at the heavyweight crown.

"Of course," if'd Joe. "Charles could make his position stronger if he beats Lee Savold or Billy Conn this winter.



A YOUNG LION—Center Ken Shultz, one of the better young players on the Washington Lions, comes to an abrupt stop in tuning up for tonight's match with the Hershey Bears at Uline Arena. Hershey is in second place in the Eastern Division of the American League

St. Louis Also Gets Lollar, Embree in 5-Player Deal

By Shirley Povich
Post Reporter

Chicago, Dec. 13.—The New York Yankees and the St. Louis Browns broke the calm of the major league trading meeting tonight with a five-player deal in which Pitcher Fred Sanford was the chief consideration.

The Yankees, in their frenzy to bolster their pitching staff, gave up three players—Pitchers Charles (Red) Embree and Dick Starr, and Catcher Sherman Lollar—plus $100,000 cash for Sanford and Catcher Roy Partee.

The 21-year-old Sanford, a right-handed curve-baller, won only 12 games and led the league in defeats incurred (21). His record against the Yankees last season was one win and five defeats. He had an earned-run average of 4.64.

Sanford Top-Flight Pitcher

Thus did the deal emphasize the inflated values on the baseball trading mart.

Despite his mediocre record, however, Sanford was recognized as one of the better young pitchers to break into the league in recent years and was handicapped by working for the sixth place Browns.

The Yankees announced immediately after the deal that Catcher Partee would be sent to one of their minor league farms. He hit .203 in 82 games last season.

Besides the $100,000 involved, the Browns were intrigued by the potentialities of Rookie Dick Starr who pitched only two innings for the Yankees last year after winning 14 and losing 9 at their Newark farm.

The Browns-Yanks deal was a blow to the Washington Club, which admitted to dickering with the Yankees for Starr in what would have been a deal involving Early Wynn or Walter Masterson, Nats' pitchers.

Nats Now After Starr

"We thought we had a chance of getting Starr, but now we'll see if we can do business with the Browns for him," said Vice President Calvin Griffith of Washington. He revealed that the Yankees were uninterested in a trade involving Mickey Vernon.

Embree and Lollar, the other figures in the Yanks to St. Louis deal, were second-string performers for New York. The Yankees went high to acquire Embree from Cleveland two years ago, but he never made a regular berth. He won five games last season against three defeats.

Lollar, who also went from Cleveland to the Yankees in the Allie Reynolds deal a few years ago, was valued chiefly for his hitting, but he batted only .211 last year, chiefly as a pinch hitter.

Tigers Spurn Nat Offer

The Washington club is discovering its American League batting champion of 1946, First Baseman Mickey Vernon, is an unexciting lure in their trade talk.

Today a trade broached to the Detroit Tigers involving Vernon was turned down flatly by General Manager Billy Evans.

Evans threw up his hands in horror when Vice President Calvin Griffith of the Nats asked for First Baseman GeGorge Vico and a pitcher, either rookie Ted Gray or Art Houtteman, for Vernon.

The Nats are insisting on a two-for-one deal in any Vernon trade with a first baseman as the first consideration and a shortstop or pitcher as a bonus.

The Tigers did attempt to switch the conversation from Vernon to a deal involving Pitcher Walter Masterson, but Griffith and Manager Joe Kuhel pointed to their own need for hurlers.

Cleveland remains a trading possibility for the Nats, with the Indians evincing some interest in Vernon and some dissatisfaction with their own first baseman, Ed Robinson and Pitcher Haynes, lately acquired by the Indians from the White Sox.

In America

Each Team Must Play 4 Night Games

Chicago, Dec. 13—Washington and the St. Louis Browns, vigorous proponents of unlimited night games, won an important concession from the American League today.

They succeeded in gaining passage of a rule compelling visiting clubs to play at least four night games in each city that wished to book that many.

In previous years, night games could be scheduled only with consent of the visiting clubs.

Traditionally, the Red Sox, Yankees and Tigers refused to play more than two night games in Washington, and they agreed to that many grudgingly.

The new ruling automatically adds six more night games to the schedule of the Nats, who played 40 games at home under the lights last season.

Lifting of the lid on night games is expected to stimulate the gate receipts, with the Yankees, Red Sox and Tigers always popular as night attractions.

WALLY MOSES, 39-year-old outfielder released by the Red Sox, found a refuge with his old boss, Connie mack, who signed him as a utility man for the A's . . . Another of Mack's former chattels returned to him when Jimmy Dykes signed on as a first-base coach . . . Ted Lyons is expected to sign as a relief pitcher with the Cubs . . . Manager Leo Durocher of the Giants continues to be his breezy self around baseball headquarters despite his upcoming session with Commissioner Chandler tomorrow on charges of "tampering" with Braves' Coach Fred Fitzsimmons . . . The report is that Durocher and the Giants will be fined plus a wrist-slapping by Chandler . . . Casey Stengel, new manager of the Yanks, is button-holing baseball men, asking their opinion of his Yankee team, which he has never seen in action . . . Stan Spence, traded to the Red Sox by the Nats last winter, can be had cheaply if Washington wants him back, and Griffith may take him . . . The shortstop the Nats would liks to have is Johnnie Lipon of the Tigers who won't be traded after his sensational season in 1948 . . . The Tigers are offering the Indians a first-line pitcher for Second Baseman Johnny Berardino.

This Screwy Sports Season Finds Defeated Undefeated, Difficult Easy

Defeated, Tenn., Dec. 13 (AP).—Defeated had hopes today of an undefeated basketball season. Defeated having defeated Difficult in their first big game of the season.

Defeated and Difficult are communities a few miles apart in Smith County. They belong to the Smith County independent basketball league.

In their big game Defeated defeated Difficult 23-18 last week. But defeated Difficult has hopes too; they vow they'll defeat Defeated next time.

Next Two Weeks 'Momentous' For Pro Football, Marshall Says

By Bill Burnett
Post Reporter

Professional football "is starting the most momentous two weeks in its history," Redskin Owner George Marshall predicted yesterday as he paid off his own team and settled down to plans for the National Football League owners' meeting next Monday at Philadelphia.

"Something like $2,000,000 was lost in pro ball this season," Marshall said after the 'Skins 28-21 victory over the New oYrk Giants in their 1948 finale. "Something big has got to happen. Watch for sensational developments all over the country."

In his regular Sunday night broadcast from New York, Gossip Columnist Walter Winchell announced point-blank that the National Football League and All-American Conference would play a "World Series of football" in 1949.

Marshall would clarify his hint very little except to say he thought the Boston Yanks of the N.F.L. might remain another year in Boston. He also said his information was that the Chicago Rockets and Buffalo Bills of the rival All-America Conference would be moved to other cities nevt year, the Rockets probably to Minneapolis.

He made no comment on a persistent rumor that the N.F.L. is ready to admit two or three of the successful A.A.C. teams into the senior circuit, a move that would most effectively kill off the junior league.

The oldest Redskins, Sammy Baugh and Dick Todd, both 34, were first to leave Washington as the season ended . . . The long-time roommates reached D. C. shortly before midnight Sunday and immediately began a motor trip to their Texas homes . . . Baugh will be back for another season, but it was the last goodbye for Todd, who announced he was through playing for good . . . Sammy had just broken his own record for number of passes attempted in one game, pitching 42 to better the mark of 41 he pitched against the Boston Yanks last year . . . For the fourth time in his career he completed 25 passes . . . Only 12 players now on the Redskin roster will make their homes in Washington during the off-season . . . Others will be scattered all over the country, awaiting the call to fall training which will open about August 1, 1949, a week earlier than usual.

Although Sunday's clash with the Giants was a so-what affair, play was unusually rugged and several times there was a threat of fights among the inter-city rivals . . . Center Clyde Ehrhardt came out of one scuffle with a gashed eyebrow . . . When it was suggested he wait until halftime to have it sewed up, big Clyde insisted: "Let's stitch it now so I can play a little more in the first half!" . . . By an unofficial count the 'Skins and Giants ran off the amazing total of 193 plays during Sunday's game, including points after touchdown, kickoffs, plays voided by penalties, etc. . . . The average for professional games is 169 plays and collegians usually run off about 143 . . . End Hugh Taylor's eight pass receptions accounting for two touchdowns, came within one pass of Eddie Saenz individual local record for the second time . . . On the train home he was chiefly worried about his 16-month-old daughter's recent fall, in which she lost a front tooth . . . "I don't want her to be like me," Hugh fretted. "My plates were rattling all around in my mouth on both those touchdown passes."

Stags Beat Baltimore, 75-70; Boston Tops St. Louis, 83-79

Indianapolis, Dec. 13 (AP).—Chicago's Stags scored 28 points in a last quarter splurge to defeat Baltimore's Bullets here tonight, 75-70.

Baltimore had Chicago down at the half, 42-35, and at the end of the third quarter, 60-47. In the final period Baltimore made only 10 points while the Stags were getting their 28-point cluster.

Guard Alter Budko of Baltimore was high scorer with 20 points, one more than Forward Andy Phillip of Chicago.

Cooper, Jones Win Fights

Jimmy Cooper caught Tim Healy of New York with his hands down in the third round of their scheduled eight-rounder and rammed through with a two-handed assault to stop the New Yorker before 769 customers at Turner's Arena last night.

Cooper, weighing 124, was cool and collected as he waited for Healy to miscue. Cooper dropped Healy earlier in the third round with a stiff left uppercut. Healy weighed 119.

Herbie Jones, 138, in the second eight-rounder of the evening, knocked out Freddie Smith, 134½, of New York in 49 seconds of the third round.

Red Gaddis, 129, had a nice right hand, but couldn't put it where it would do much good very often. He landed often enough, however, to earn a draw with Burt Wick, another Washingtonian, who weighed 127½.

In a preliminary four-rounder, Billy Wright, 126, of Washington, outpointed Baby Boy Pearson, 126, another local boy.

Garland Edwards, 154½ and Holly Mims, 153, fought to a draw in another eight-rounder.

Mich. State Out Of Big Ten Grid Play Until 1953

Chicago, Dec. 13 (AP).—Michigan State, the Western Conference's new tenth member, will not enter championship football competition in the league until 1953.

Michigan State will enter title competition in all other sports as soon as possible. Official recognition in the conference is pending a three-man committee's investigation into the Spartans' athletic setup.

Skaaland Wins From Savoldi

Angelo Savoldi took a violent dislike to the referee last night for which behavior his opponent, Arnold Skaaland, was awarded the bout in their feature wrestling exhibition at Uline Arena.

In the other matches, Frank Hewitt and Jim Wallis defeated Rocco Columbo and Steve Gob; Jim Wallis won for the second time by hitting Fritz Wallach's head against a ring post and Frank Hewitt lost to Sam Alexander on a disqualification.

Pauley Seeks Club for Coast

Chicago, Dec. 13 (AP).—Ed Pauley, California oil magnate, said today he was interested in purchasing "any" major league ball club if the franchise could be moved to Los Angeles.

Pauley said he had made no definite offers, although he admitted he talked "socially" with both Bob Hannegan, president of the St. Louis Cardinals, and Richard Muckerman, St. Louis Browns' owner.

Pauley, who discussed acquiring the Browns from Muckerman a year ago, said the people of the Pacific Coast deserve representation in the major league.

"Los Angeles is growing by leaps and bounds and should have a major league baseball club," he said. "Every sport is big league in Los Angeles except baseball. It's bound to come sooner of later, why can't the majors realize that?"

When asked about reports that Pauley had made a bid for the Browns, Bill DeWitt, vice president of the club, said:

"There is nothing to it. Nobody has made an offer."

President Eddie Rosenblum will report on the recent national AAU convention in New York Thursday night when the District of Columbia AAU meets at Jewish Community Center at 8 o'clock.

Terp Quint Bows, 54-45, To Richmond

The University of Maryland received a 54-45 Southern Conference loss last night at the hands of the University of Richmond at College Park. It was the first conference loss for the Terps and the third out of four starts for the season.

The Spiders' high scoring ace was Elmo Stephenson with 18 points. Bob Murray hit the cords for 12 for the Terps. A total of 45 fouls were called in this encounter. Maryland annexed 18 while Richmond had 27 called against them.

The Terps once again missed out on their foul shooting with 12 misses as against the 14 that cost them last Saturday's close 77-75 loss to Loyola.

Little Eddie Crescenze was sidelined for the Old Liners and Guard Charlie Mack, previous high scoring ace for the Marylandites, had himself a bad night with four points.

Richmond's Art Haines, a senior from Harvey, Ill., collected a total of 10 points and harassed Maryland scorers all night by his fine floor play. Jim Suttenfield, 6-foot-2 center from Lynchburg, Va., collected a total of eight for his night's offerings.

The Terps now have a record of one win over V. P. I. against losses to Temple, Loyola and Richmond. Maryland will next meet Virginia at College Park on Thursday night.

The Maryland Frosh won their opener, 53-37, over Naval Receiving Quarters K.

Van Buren, Thompson, Muha LeadNational League Statistics

Philadelphia, Dec. 14 (AP).—The figures showed today that the Philadelphia Eagles had the greatest array of individual talent in the National Football League in the 1948 season.

Steve Van Buren, the Louisiana locomotive who runs like he's diesel-powered, jarred through opposing lines for the greatest total of yards along the ground.

Tommy Thompson, the Tulsa veteran, turned in the best all-around passing record in the league.

Joe Muha, once of Virginia Military Institute, had the top punting record in the 10-team circuit.

No other team won more than one individual championship with the other five titles split up among the Chicago Cardinals, Chicago Bears, Los Angeles Rams, New York Giants and Washington Redskins.

Pat Harder of the Cardinals—winners of the circuit's western division—repeated as scoring champion, with a 12-game total of 110 points built up on six touchdowns, 53 points after touchdown and seven field goals in 17 tries.

Mal Kutner, Harder's teammate, was second in scoring with 90 points tallied on 15 touchdowns, greatest number of six-pointers in the circuit. Cliff Patton, Eagle place-kicking guard, was third with 50 conversions and eight field goals in 12 tries for 74 points. Patton's eight field goals were tops in the league.

Tom Fears, Rams' freshman, won the pass-receiving crown, grabbing a total of 51 flips. Pete Pihos of the Eagles was second with 46 and Kutner third with 41. Kutner gained the greatest yardage in pass grabbing with 923 yards. Pihos was

White Easter 3d; Winner Pays $3.60

By Walter Haight
Post Reporter

Charles Town, W. Va., Dec. 13.—In a tight photo finish, Mrs. J. D. S. Coleman's Certified nosed out D. G. Smith's Blue Falcon here today. A length off this battling pair came E. L. Poston's White Easter to be third in a field of seven competing in the Potomac Purse.

The victory was a popular one with the favorite players who collected a $3.60 win mutuel after the majority of the customers believed Certified had lost the decision.

Saddled by Trainer H. M. Simpson of Washington, Certified had the worst of the racing luck, being shut off while making a move on the inside approaching the stretch. However, Jockey Charlie Richmond sent the Milkman colt to the outside and brought him on cleverly in the final drive.

Monteiro Drives Blue Falcon

Blue Falcon, an Upper Crust bred gelding—by Mahmoud out of Top Flight, the one-time C. V. Whitney star, and sold for $30,000 as a yearling, turned in a fine effort. Jockey Arthur Monteiro made the 5-year-old race E. L. Miller's Belle Moose into submission and then kept him going to the end under strong handling.

White Easter, veteran mare, loomed menacingly in the stretch while moving on the outside. She appeared headed for victory some 10 yards from the finish line but she faltered.

The track was muddy as a result of a heavy downpour last night. However, the weather overhead would have done credit to a beach day at Miami, many of the customers putting top coats and fur jackets aside.

Close Finishes Abound

Certified, in winning for the fourth time this year and sending his earnings for 1948 to $14,125 was clocked in 1:29 3/5 for the about 7 furlongs.

Close finishes were standard equipment during the afternoon. It was by the scantiest sort of a nose that Aylesbury, owned by Mrs. Mary Knieriem of Cumberland, got home in front of Mrs. Stanley S. Greene, Sr's Battletown in the seventh race, the day's secondary feature. Third money in this test of 6 furlongs, plus 120 feet, went to E. B. Townsend's Maryknoll, the favorite. Aylesbury paid $8.40.

The daily double paid $81.20 on the three and five combination. S. H. Hall's Eluros, making his first start since 1945, took the first race at $10. And A. J. Poinsett's Cheesestraw annexed the second at $12.80. Both races were photo finishes.

American, Hoyas Play Penn State

BIG HELP—At 6 foot 7 inches, Center Marty Costa is a big asset to the Penn State basketball team. Costa & Co. open a two-day invasion of Washington tonight. They meet American U. this evening at American and Georgetown Wednesday night at the National Guard Armory

American University's annual basketball series with Penn State opens tonight as the Nittany Lions invade the local gym. Tomorrow night State moves out to the National Guard Armory to face Georgetown in the Hoyas' first appearance at the armory this year.

Last season A. U. dropped both of its games against the hot Lions but this year Coach Staff Cassell thinks the tide may turn. The Eagles have won five of their seven starts and although first liners Ronnie Garshag and Fred Fling were injured slightly on a trip last week both will be ready tonight.

Penn State is also in top shape under the guidance of Coach John Lawther. Recently returned to the lineup is Milt Simon, a key player who misse dthe Lions' only previous start—a 40-33 loss to Pittsburgh—with a charley horse.

State's only small player is Joe Tocci, with the remainder of the first-stringers well over 6 feet. Biggest men on the roster are Mart Costa, at 6 foot 6, and Lee Schisler, at 6 foot 5.

Today's only other court action takes place at Quantico, where the Marine five plays host to Patuxent N.A.S.

Colt Fan Gets Suspended Fine For Bills' Rhubarb

Baltimore, Dec. 13 (AP).—Charles Ledvinka, the only one arrested in the melee which followed yesterday's Eastern division playoff between Baltimore and Buffalo of the All-America Pro Football Conference, today was fined $10 and costs.

Police Magistrate August A. Kozlovsky suspended the fine after hearing testimony from Ledvinka and Patrolman Elmer Glubernatis, who had arrested Ledvinka on a disorderly conduct charge.

The officer said Ledvinka was one of about 500 spectators who jammed around the dressing rooms after the game and refused to leave. Glubernatis said Ledvinka took his police badge number and threatened to get him suspended. Ledvinka said the officer pushed and cursed him.

Cassell Speaks

Staff Cassell, mentor of American University's basketball team, will expound the "Psychology of Coaching" for Exchange Club members at their regular weekly luncheon at the Burlington Hotel today.

Heath Will Sign With Green Bay, Says Lambeau

Green Bay, Wis., Dec. 13 (U.P.)—Coach Curly Lambeau announced today that Stan Heath, All-American passing wizard from the University of Nevada, will sign with the Green Bay Packers "after the first of the year."

Lambeau said Heath, sought by every team in professional football circuits, is as good as in the Packer fold. He said he had talked contract terms with Heath durjng the weekend by telephone.

Lambeau declined, however, to say how much Heath would get.

Colts Tittle Named Rookie of Year

New York, Dec. 13 (U.P.)—Passing Wizard Y. A. Tittle of Baltimore was named rookie of the year and old, dependable Otto Graham of Cleveland selected most valuable player in the All America Conference today by United Press football writers.

Tittle's selection was unanimous. The former Louisiana State University star carried the Colts to the brink of the Eastern Division championship—a long way from their last-place position of 1947—in this his first year in professional football.

Graham nosed out Frankie Albert of the San Francisco Forty-niners for MVP honors.

The Greenbelt Recreation Department basketball team defeated the Laurel Legion team, 43-33, last night.

Mrs. Dunbar Skates at 75

The first lady in sports in the Washington, Alexandria and northern Virginia area is 75 years young today and will be honored with an all-sports night birthday party at the new Alexandria Skating Arena Friday night.

She's Mrs. Annie Dunbar of Alexandria, an all-round athlete at 3 score and 15. The arena people have arranged a big skating show in her honor. High up on the program they list an exhibition on wheels by Mrs. Dunbar.

It all started when she decided to "play a little" after 65 years of hard work, many of them helping her husband run his business until he died 25 years ago. After skating, in quick succession came swimming, cycling, jitterbugging.

So cast off your canes, old-timers, lay aside your specs and listen to her testimonial. "Sports have helped to keep me young and happy at a time when many people would either have folded up or given up. My health's good, my spirit's better, and I expect to be in circulation for some time yet."

Boys Club Plans Tournament

The Boys Club of Washington has completed arrangements for its eleventh annual Christmas Basketball Tournament, which will run from December 27 through January 5. Places are open for teams in weight classes from 80 to 150 pounds. Varsity or junior members of high school or prep teams are ineligible, as are men past their twenty-second birthday. Both individual and team prizes will be awarded to winners. Call Ollie Dryzer, Atlantic 0949, for details.

Van Buren, Thompson Lead

second at 766 and Fears third with 698.

Veteran George McAfee of the Bears led in punt returns, taking back 30 boots for 417 yards, including one 60-yard jaunt. Joe Scott of the Giants, a rookie, led in kickoff returns with 20 tries for 569 yards including one 99-yard trip.

Jerry Davis of the Cardinals was second in both of these departments.

Dan Sandifer, Redskins' rookie back, led in pass interceptions with 13 thefts for a return of 258 yards. His mark eclipsed the old loop season standard of 11 established in 1943 by Sammy Baugh, also of the 'Skins.

The passing competition was stiff throughout the year with honors pretty well even in individual departments. Thompson, however, was head and shoulders about the pack in the NFL's system of inverse grading.

Conversion To Buses on Benning Line Held Likely

Quick PUC Approval Of Request Expected; Transit Firm Asks May 1 Switchover

The Public Utilities Commission is expected to authorize the substitution of buses for streetcars on the Benning Rosslyn line within a week.

This became apparent yesterday when a spokesman of the Interior Department told the PUC that the Nation's petroleum shortage is so much improved that it no longer could be considered a factor in deciding upon a Capital Transit Co. request to convert some carlines to buses.

The PUC approved the Benning conversion last year, but when it was about to become effective last April, Max W. Ball, then director of the gas and oil division of the Interior Department, urged that the action be deferred to conserve oil.

Approval of the transit company request would replace streetcars with buses on the Rosslyn-Benning streetcar line between the Kenilworth and Seat Pleasant terminals and 15th st. and New York Av. nw.

S. E. Emmons, general manager of the Capitol Transit Co., asked that May 1, 1949, be set as the date for the changeover. He said much time would be needed to train personnel and make buses available.

Robert E. Friedman, acting director of the Interior Department's gas and oil division, testified that "the department is of the opinion that the petroleum situation is such that the considerations that normally guide the decisions and actions of the public utility commission, and not oil supplies, should control." He warned, however, that oil still remains a relatively scarce commodity.

John Fleming, director of purchases and supplies of the transit company, though stating that the changeover would increase their oil consumption by 1,420,000 gallons annually, said he had been assured by several oil companies that this added amount could be provided.

Another witness, David J. Weltman, president of the Benning Businessmen's Association, told the PUC that his group strongly favored buses because they would help relieve traffic congestion in the area. He quoted a Washington Post article describing Benning rd. ne. as the "worst stretch in the District" from a traffic hazard standpoint.

Group Named To Study Aid For Hospital

Alexandria Mayor William T. Wilkins yesterday announced a five-member committee to seek a permanent solution to Alexandria Hospital's financial troubles.

The committee: Chester G. Pierce, vice president of the Citizens National Bank, chairman; the Rev. Thomas A. Frazer, jr., rector of St. Paul's Episcopal Church; Harry D. Kirk, insurance and real estate man; Charles Slagle, manager of George Mason Hotel, and Francis H. Fannon fuel dealer.

Wilkins said the committee would try to determine how far the city should go to aid the hospital financially, and what the hospital can do to help itself.

Meat Cutters O. K. 10-Cent Pay Rise

AFL meat cutters in Washington last night ratified a contract with three chain stores calling for a 10-cent-an-hour wage increase.

The new scale will range from a low of $46.50 for a 45-hour, 5-day week to a high of $94.

Ratification was voted by members of Meat Cutters Local No. 555 at a meeting in Laborers' Hall, 525 New Jersey ave. nw. About 1000 workers employed by the Atlantic and Pacific, Safeway Stores and American Stores are affected.

Corporation Counsel Scored By Washington Presbytery

The Presbytery of Washington City last night strongly protested release of information on alleged violation of a District marriage regulation by ministers before the ministers had been officially notified.

Meeting at Northminster Presbyterian Church, the ministers and laymen in Presbytery unanimously passed a resolution condemning the District Corporation Counsel's office for its action.

The resolution stated that the action did "grave injury to certain ministers and to the cause of Christ." It called the release of publicity to the press concerning the alleged violation of a regulation requiring reporting of marriages within 10 days "reprehensible."

The information, the resolution said, was given out before the ministers had received notice and before they had had an opportunity to make any explanation.

It was set forth that in no case was a minister of the Presbytery "guilty of willful or serious violation of the regulation." The clerk of the office which released the information appears to destroy the envelopes in which returns are made and has no authoritative information on the date of mailing, the resolution asserted.

It went on to call the present statute defective in not providing that a copy of any license issued for marriage shall be sent to the minister named on the license. It stated that there is no requirement in the present law demanding prompt use of licenses issued.

Court Aid Invoked

The resolution requested that the court be asked to remedy "inaccuracies" in the present statute and also that caution be taken against repetition of "unfair injury to clergy of the District of Columbia."

A score of ministers were involved in the alleged marriage law violation. One forfeited $10 collateral and the others were released after warnings.

Assistant Corporation Counsel Clark King announced, meanwhile, that ministers hereafter will be given one chance to meet the requirements of the law before any action is taken against them.

In a final report on a study of practices of ministers in the Presbytery in remarrying divorced couples, the Rev. James F. Lundquist revealed that 87 per cent of the ministers remarry the "scripturally innocent" party. The majority of this group require, however, a one-year period from the date the decree is granted.

Three Demur

Three ministers in the Presbytery said they never remarried either party to a divorce. The Presbytery includes 42 churches and four missions in the Greater Washington area.

Speaking on the report, Dr. Earl Franklin Fowler, pastor of Sixth Presbyterian Church, said that the church must recognize that an individual can make a mistake. He stated that if the church was perfectly honest, it would find it difficult to receive into membership anyone purely on the basis of church law.

In its original meaning, he said, adultry, the only scriptural reason for divorce, referred to the whole marriage relationship rather than a purely physical relationship. The phrase "the innocent party," he said, is "very shallow ground" because it is difficult to prove who is innocent.

Would Amend Law

Dr. Fowler stated that the church must consider not whether "we will soil ourselves" by taking in the parties to a divorce, but whether they will be helped by being taken into the fellowship of the church.

Speaking on remarriage of divorced couples, James Sherrier, moderator-elect of the Presbytery and a Washington lawyer, called for amendment of the District marriage law to provide that both parties to a marriage appear before the authorities and tell about their status under oath. Under the present statute, he said, it is possible to obtain a license without either party appearing.

In another action the Presbytery approved a budget for 1949 of $8764.20. Last year's budget was $7595.20.

Falls While Working In Area Fatal to 2 Men Nearing 70

Two men nearing 70 died in falls yesterday, one in Mount Rainier, Md., the other in Hyattsville, Md.

Charles W. Nichols, 68, of 3108 Varnum st., Mount Rainier, fell 30 feet from a ladder to a concrete pavement when repairing a roof on the home he owned at 3104 Varnum st. He died at Leland Memorial Hospital, Riverdale. Dr. John T. Maloney, a Prince Georges County medical examiner, issued a certificate of accidental death.

Mr. Nichols retired four years ago after 50 years as a telegrapher with the Pennsylvania Railroad. A native of Odenton, Md., he was a bachelor, and lived with two of his five sisters, Mrs. Laura Disney and Mrs. Florence Newell. A third sister, Mrs. Elizabeth Watts, lives next door, and the others, also surviving, are Mrs. Sadie Anderson of Odenton and Mrs. Olive McKeown, Brentwood. Mr. Nichols was a member of the Odd Fellows and the Brotherhood of Telegraphers.

Henry C. Sanford, 69, of 1924 Capitol ave. ne., died in a 6-foot fall when finishing cement work on steps of a new apartment house at Jamestown rd. and Lancer dr., Hyattsville. Dr. Maloney said he struck on his head. The Brentwood Rescue Squad took him to Leland Memorial Hospital, where he was pronounced dead.

The medical examiner said he would perform an autopsy to determine whether the veteran workman died from the fall, or from a heart attack. While Mr. Sanford worked as a cement finisher during the week, on Sundays he was known as "Reverend" at the Mount Vernon Methodist Church across the street from his home, acting as an assistent to the pastor. He leaves his wife, Bessie, and five children.

3 Men Arrested In $20,000 Theft Of Clothing Here

Arrest of three men in the theft last month of more than $20,000 worth of clothing from Luna Cleaners, 1405 14th St. nw., was announced last night by police.

The case was broken Saturday, police said, with arrest of a 17-year-old youth who later revealed the identities of the two others, one 19 and the other 29.

Police said more than 50 articles of the stolen clothing had been recovered from the trio. Formal charges had not been placed last night.

The case was broken, police said, by 2nd Precinct Detective George C. Trather, Pvt. Louis R. Screen and Pvt. Owen W. Davis.

Hearing on Theft Charge Set in Fatal Car Crash

Alexander Tyson, 22, of 5200 N. 19th rd., Arlington, was scheduled for a hearing in Arlington police court today, charged with stealing an automobile which later killed James E. Felli, 44, Gainesville, Va., farmer, in a crash on Warrenton hwy., Friday.

Tyson and his uncle, Sandy McCormick, same address, were lodged in Prince William County jail yesterday in default of $1000 bail on an additional charge of leaving the scene of an accident.

Tyson's brother, John, 24, was recovering in Arlington Hospital last night from injuries suffered when the car, police say he was driving struck Felli's jeep while it was being chased by State police.

ABC Studies Restaurant Gaming Case

Vasilios E. Papagianes, proprietor of a restaurant at 1215 7th st. nw., yesterday appeared before the Alcoholic Beverage Control Board on three charges of using the restaurant for unlawful purposes—gambling. The board took the case under advisement.

Police said a restaurant patron, Helen Hamilton, 36, of 634 N st. nw., was arrested there last September on charges of lottery and possession of lottery slips. Police said she accepted numbers bets while in the restaurant.

The board also took under advisement an aplication by Freda Ezersky for a transfer of a class A license—off-sale of all beverages—from the premises of 3301 Connecticut ave. nw. to 4137 Wheeler rd. se.

Mitchell's Grill Appeals Suspension of License

Counsel for Mitchell's Grill, 235 G st. nw., late yesterday appealed to the District Commissioners to lift a recent license suspension order against the grill until a new hearing could be held.

F. Joseph Donohue, attorney for the restaurant, whose liquor license was suspended until January 31, 1949, by the Alcoholic Beverage Control Board last week, said:

"The action of the ABC in finding the respondent guilty on 43 of 57 counts on uncorroborated testimony of a single witness is so wholly indefensible as to warrent the serious consideration of your honorable board."

The suspension order was issued at the conclusion of spectacular ABC hearings during which one policeman accused another of "framing" the grill.

Perrell Death Asked in D. C. Rape Trial

The prosecution yesterday demanded the death penalty for Elvid H. Perrell, 26, on trial in District Court for the rape of a park policeman's wife.

The policeman's 31-year-old blonde wife took the witness stand in the court of Judge Henry A. Schweinhaut. She told the jury of 11 men and one woman that Perrell forced her into an automobile September 7, drove her to a secluded street and forced her into sexual relations.

She maintained that Perrell threatened her and struck her before the alleged attack.

Perrell's defense, his attorney disclosed is based on the theory that the assault was not against the will of the woman. Perrell is a farmer from Bear Creek, N. C.

The complaining witness said that when she confronted Perrell at a police lineup after the attack he pleaded:

"Can't we compromise this, I've got a wife and two children.

She testified she replied, "Why didn't he think of that before he did what he did to me."

She said that she was walking from the bus stop after a day's work as a telephone operator when she first saw Perrell near her home in Southeast Washington. She said she refused his offer of a ride and that he then forced her into the automobile.

Perrell is expected to take the stand today. The prosecutor is John C. Conliff, jr. Charles E. Ford is defense attorney.

Segregation Report Maligns Citizens, Civic Leader Holds

Racial discrimination in Washington cannot be blamed upon one race any more than the other, Clifford H. Newell, former president of the Federation of Citizens Associations, declared last night.

Referring to the report released last week by the National Committee on Segregation in the Nation's Capital, he said at a meeting of the Glover Park Citizens Association at the Benjamin Stoddert School, 39th and Calvert sts. nw.

"I personally am 100 per cent behind educating the colored race to the point where it will want and will enjoy the same social customs we have."

Education, Time Need

Admitting the presence of discrimination in Washington, Newell asserted, "The only way ever to change things in relation to races is absolutely through education—and duration of time."

Newell declared, "The author of the report has maligned and insulted every true citizen of this great city."

While he personally would not tolerate any distinction between political rights, Newell said he does make a distinction between social rights and desires of the races. Along this line he declared "colored people move into a neighborhood and soon make tenements out of the homes."

This, he said, was because "colored people crowd a house and don't take care of the property as white people would."

Negro leaders were praised by the speaker, who asserted they deserve congratulations for having come as far as they have. Eventual solution of the problem could be obtained, he said, "if only they would devote themselves to the uplift of their own people instead of spending money to break down our society."

Urging action to counter the report, he declared, "It is up to us to rise up and positively demand the truth be placed before this self-appointed committee which is making a study of ourselves. We owe it to ourselves and our children.

"We have had people who know nothing of Washington tell us how badly we are treating the colored people," he said, "but I have had no colored person tell me we are treating them badly. You older citizens know Washington has long been called 'Heaven for Negroes.'"

Following Newell's talk, the group voted to invite a member of the segregation report committee to speak at a future meeting in support of the report.

Pontoon Bridges Favored

The Fort Davis Citizens Association last night agreed to support other Southeast Washington groups in asking the District Commissioners to construct two pontoon bridges across the Anacostia River for temporary relief of Sousa Bridge traffic.

Kenilworth Citizens Association urged such action at its meeting last week.

The Fort Davis group, meeting at the Ryland Methodist Church, Branch st. and Pennsylvania ave. se., appointed Mrs. W. T. Cameron, 1500 35th st. se., as chairman of its committee for listing accommodations during the 1949 inaugural.

Unit Holds Interior Should Rule Play Plots

The Ivy City Civic Association last night went on record in favor of Solicitor General Mastin G. White's opinion giving control of playgrounds in the District to the Department of the Interior.

Meeting at Crummel School, Gallaudet st. and Central pl. ne., the association urged all members to write Attorney General Tom Clark in support of the White opinion.

Kalorama Group Backs D. C. Playground Control

The Federation of Citizens Associations' stand supporting Recreation Board control of District playgrounds was indorsed last night by the Kalorama Citizens Association after heated discussion.

Vote on the question was carried by a 2-to-1 margin during a meeting at Adams School, 19th and California sts. nw.

Tools on 5 & 10 Counter Used To Loot Store Safe of $5000

Weekend receipts of $5000 were stolen late Sunday from a safe in the Peter Pan Five and Ten Cent Store, 1510 7th st. nw.

The safe was opened by breaking off the dial and punching through the tumblers, police said. The thieves apparently were amateurs, since they carried no tools, but used a screw driver and hammer taken from a counter in the store, it was reported.

The theft was discovered yesterday at 8 a. m. and reported by Carl R. Webb, store manager, who told police entrance was gained by forcing the door from an elevator shaft on the roof.

Meanwhile, police were holding two Philadelphia men who were surprised trying to punch open a safe in the office of the Ambassador Theater, 18th st. and Columbia rd. nw., early yesterday.

A night watchman, George Myrick, of 1312 W st. nw., heard a tapping noise in the office, and peeked in the door. He stole away and summoned police from a nearby police call box.

Pvts. Arthur Sweeney and Eugene Mower, of the Thirteenth Precinct, responded, and entered the office quietly with drawn guns. The two men were arrested without a struggle.

Police identified them as John P. Ginder, 30, and Edward J. Ashton, 26, who came to Washington recently and rented a room in the 1800 block of Columbia rd. nw. They will be charged with housebreaking.

The manager of the theater, Robert Etris, 1841 Columbia rd. nw., did not disclose the amount of cash in the safe but said it was a large sum, representing the weekend receipts.

Butter and Cigarettes Stolen From Safeway

Eighty pounds of butter and 140 cartons of cigarettes, valued at $238, were stolen from the Safeway Store, 724 17th st. nw., during the weekend.

Manager Reuben A. Heflin told police entrance was gained by breaking a transom over a show window.

Two public schools also were entered over the weekend, police reported. Mrs. Enda S. Browne, principal of the Anthony Bowen School, 2d and M sts. sw., told police canned goods valued at $15, were taken from the food lockers in the domestic science room. A telephone coin box was pried from the wall, and looted. Entrance was gained by breaking a basement window.

Miss Beatrice Cooper, assistant principal of the nearby Randall Junior High School, 3d and K sts. nw., reported that school also was entered through a basement window. An unsuccessful attempt was made to break open the telephone.

Building Guard of 74 Shoots Holdup Man

James M. Williams, 74, nearing his home at 1631 S st. nw. on foot about 1 a. m. yesterday, "heard them comin' in a hurry from behind" down the dark street.

Williams

Then, as he had feared, one man seized him roughly from behind and another demanded: "Let me have it."

Williams, a Federal building guard, gave it to him.

"I pumped one in him," Williams was quoted by police as saying. Williams still has the $12 which was in his wallet.

In critical condition at Gallinger Hospital last night under police guard was a man identified as Joseph Hamilton, 24, of 923 New Hampshire ave. nw. Hamilton has been charged with attempted robbery. Police said he suffered a .22-caliber bullet wound in his abdomen.

Police also have picked up a 19-year-old youth who is being held for questioning. He was nabbed after Hamilton, at the hospital, told police the youth was his companion.

Williams was released in $300 bond yesterday for a Municipal Court hearing December 28 on a technical charge of assault with a dangerous weapon. He is a veteran of ten years as a special policeman for the Federal Works Agency.

Publicist's Wife Fails to Win Divorce on Cruelty Charge

Judge F. Dickinson Letts refused yesterday to grant a limited divorce to Mrs. Elizabeth Quigley Macnamee, 53, who charged her husband with cruelty.

Mrs. Macnamee is a former Metropolitan Opera ballet member and a member of an old Washington family. She contended her husband, Wallace Bruce Macnamee, 57, an $11,000 a year publicist, drank heavily, berated her as a "parasite" and knocked her down on at least three occasions.

Speaking of this, the District Court jurist said they were "trivial" arguments that are sometimes prevalent in "normal and well regulated" families. Judge Letts said that such arguments are usually quickly forgotten.

He added that the physical cruelty alleged by the wife was also insufficient for a divorce. He ruled it was inconceivable that the instances mentioned might have been detrimental to her health and well-being.

Macnamee is a former newspaperman and now an administrative officer in the National Federation of American Shipping. In 1941 he was named the fifteenth best-dressed man in the Nation.

He took the witness stand to deny any wrongdoing. He admitted that he drank moderately and also that he had "vehement" arguments of an intellectual nature.

He denied striking his wife but admitted accusing her of "pathological laziness."

Macnamee testified:

"I expected her at least to engage in war work or read some books or to take an active interest in the things I was doing. I think that any marriage is at least a 50-50 proposition. I was working hard and paying all the bills and I didn't see that she was doing anything that was useful."

The Macnamees married in 1940 and resided together at 3415 34th st. nw., the wife's parents home, until the splitup in August, 1947.

Scutheast Civic Group Cedes Part of Its Area

Garfield-Douglas Civic Association meeting at Turner School, Stanton rd. and Alabama ave. se., last night ceded a portion of its area to the newly formed Erie Civic Association.

The territory turned over to the new group is bounded by Bruce pl. se. on the south, Wagner pl. se. on the east, 16th st. se. on the west and Moris rd. se. on the north. It covers about 10 square blocks, according to Leon A. Thompson, president of the Garfield-Douglas group.

Thompson said no members of his association presently live in the ceded area. The meeting was attended by 25 persons.

Citizens Group Opposes Apex Rezoning Plan

Four hundred members of the American University Park Citizens Association, meeting at Hurst Hall on the American University campus, last night voted to oppose plans for rezoning to commercial use of certain areas south of Massachusetts ave. nw.

According to officials of the association, a Washington development company has petitioned to change zoning regulations in the section adjoining the Apex Shopping Center to allow for parking areas.

C & P Seeks, Stopgap Rise In Maryland Phone Rates

Petition Would Hike Bills 2 Cents Daily Pending PSC Action On Permanent Boost

A temporary telephone rate increase, which would add an average of 2 cents a day to the bills of nearby Maryland subscribers, was asked yesterday by the Chesapeake and Potomac Telephone Co. of Baltimore.

A petition, which would boost flat rates and toll charges throughout the State, was filed with the Maryland Public Service Commission. The commission was asked to approve the temporary schedule, pending its decision on a request for a permanent increase which was filed November 10.

The company said the temporary increase would affect about 60,000 subscribers in nearby Montgomery and Prince Georges Counties.

In asking the temporary increases to be made effective on or before February 15, the company pointed out that "many months" would be required to decide the question of a permanent increase, and that the company's earnings are now "critically low."

The permanent increase will add an estimated $3,500,000 annually to the company's revenue, if approved.

Under the proposed new rates, which would vary throughout the State, flat rates for single-party residential service in the area adjacent to the District will be increased 75 cents a month, and bills of subscribers on two-party lines, 50 cents.

In Bethesda, Silver Spring, Hyattsville and Capitol Heights, for example, individual service charges would jump from $5.25 to $6 a month, and two-party service from $4.50 to $5.

Examples of how station-to-station tolls would be increased are the following: Rockville to Baltimore and Upper Marlboro to Baltimore, from 30 to 35 cents; Hyattsville to Baltimore, 25 to 30 cents. Person-to-person rates would be boosted in proportion.

The company said it would furnish bond to insure refund of any amounts collected in excess of the rates finally fixed by the commission.

Phone Rate Hike Favored By Federation

The Montgomery County Civic Federation last night went on record in favor of "a reasonable increase" in Maryland telephone rates provided the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co. of Baltimore shows its present rates are inadequate.

Meeting at Bethesda Elementary School, the delegates adopted an emergency resolution asking, however, that any increase be "equitably" prorated to all subscribers, with due consideration for residential users.

The resolution requested the Maryland Public Service Commission to scrutinize carefully the telephone company's application to determine whether such an increase is justified and necessary. The resolution was introduced by W. Paul Coppinger, chairman of the federation's public utilities committee.

The federation is made up of 68 civic associations in the county. The sixty-eighth group, the Colesville Civic Association, joined last night.

In other business, the federation reaffirmed its stand for repeal of the Lindsay law, which prohibits nonpartisan election of county councils in counties where a charter has been adopted.

The federation favored continuance of the present liquor dispensary system and disapproved any attempt to substitute private distribution for profit. The action, followed the report of the State Board of Revenue Estimates, opposing the monopoly system for distribution of malt beverages.

Area News in Brief

Fight Fails to Halt SA Band Concert

A fight between a suspected shoplifter and a store detective failed to stop the music of a Salvation Army band, police said yesterday.

The incident occurred Saturday night, police said, at 8th st. and Market Space nw. The participants were Rogers Williams, 26, of 5405 Addison Chapel rd. ne., and Mark Roberts, a Kann's Store detective, police said.

Roberts said he chased Williams into the center of the Salvation Army band concert area, but that the band continued playing. Its song, Roberts added, was "Silent Night."

Williams, charged with stealing a $10.50 pocketbook and with assault, was held in Municipal Court under $500 bond for jury trial January 10.

In another shoplifting case, Raymond Jones, 51, of 1314 R st. nw., was fined $25 on a charge of stealing a 50-cent wool cap from McCrory's. He was fined another $50 for illegally carrying an ice-pick.

James D. Peyton, 27, of 302 Florida ave. nw., was held for the grand jury under $300 bond on a charge of stealing 14 boxes of nylon hose, valued at $79, from the Hecht Co. According to police, Peyton posed as a stockboy to carry out the stockings.

$1000 Violin Vanishes

Arlington police yesterday were looking for a missing violin, copied from an original Stradivarius, which they said was valued at $1000.

The instrument, owned by Arlington chiropractor Louis C. Mitman, vanished after his 14-year-old daughter, Joyce, left it on an automobile fender as she boarded a bus last week.

A description of the instrument, said to have been made about 1750, has been sent to second-hand stores and pawnbrokers' exchanges in Washington, Alexandria and Arlington.

Mattress Fire Victim

Willie Smith, of No. 4 Johnson's ct. nw., suffered third-degree burns on a leg last night when a mattress caught fire in his bedroom.

He was treated at Emergency Hospital and sent to Gallinger.

Police said a cigarette apparently had been dropped on the mattress.

Unwise Solomon

King Solomon McCray, 19, of 911 N. Alfred st., Alexandria, was held for action of the grand jury in Alexandria Police Court yesterday, charged with stabbing a 22-year-old girl Saturday night.

McCray pleaded guilty and was held under $1000 bond. The girl, Edna Taylor, of 820 N. Patrick st., was treated at Alexandria Hospital for a slash on her right thigh and then released.

Makes One of Last Hops

The Wright brothers' flying machine made one of its last take-offs yesterday. It was lifted into the air and suspended by ropes from the ceiling of the National Museum, a unit of the Smithsonian Institution.

The airplane will be presented formally to the institution on Friday, the forty-fifth anniversary of the plane's flight at Kitty Hawk, N. C.

The craft was returned from London, where it was sent 20 years ago by Orville Wright.

The "Kitty Hawk" will share the north wall of the museum with the "Spirit of St. Louis," the plane in which Charles A. Lindbergh flew from New York to Paris 21 years ago.

Cabbie Catches Suspect

The quick action of an Alexandria cab driver resulted in a man being held for the grand jury yesterday in Alexandria Police Court, charged with housebreaking and grand larceny.

George Moore of 109 S. Patrick st. said he was standing on the sidewalk in the 1000 block of King st. Sunday when he saw a man break a show window in a shop across the street, stick his hand through the hole and run up the street.

Moore caught the man, identified as Ben W. Wilson, 46, no fixed address, and held him until police arrived. Wilson pleaded guilty to the charge that he took $160 in rings from the window of the P. & D. Loan Co., 1011 King st.

16 Indicted in Thefts

Burglaries caused the indictment yesterday of 16 persons on housebreaking charges.

They were among a total of 38 indictments returned by the District grand jury in District Court.

Soil Test Contract Let For Gallinger Building

First step in construction of a new 119-bed pediatrics and crippled children's building at Gallinger was taken yesterday with the awarding of a contract for a site soil investigation.

Award for testing conditions at 19th and B sts. se. went to Raymond Concrete Pile Co. of Washington and New York. The bid, one of two submitted, was $1770.

Construction is expected to start next July.

Sgourdas Reburial Rites Wednesday

Reburial services will be held at Arlington Cemetery at 2 p. m. Wednesday for Staff Sergt. Constantine Sgourdas, 29, only son of Mr. and Mrs. Athens Sgourdas, 200 Massachusetts ave. nw.

Sergt. Sgourdas

Sergeant Sgourdas was killed in a jeep accident in Czechoslovakia, June 15, 1945, as his unit was redeploying for the Pacific. He had been in the Army 3½ years, and went overseas as a tank instructor in December, 1944. He was a native of Cumberland, Md., and a graduate of Central High School here.

At the time of his enlistment, Sergeant Sgourdas was working in New York, where his parents had moved for a time, returning later to Washington. The elder Sgourdas, who once operated a restaurant here, is now retired. He was formerely president of the council of St. Sophia Greek Orthodox Church, 8th and L sts. nw., whose present rector, the Rev. Amilianos Laloussis, will conduct the funeral services.

Robert S. Briffault

Hastings, England, Dec. 13 (AP).—Robert Stephen Briffault, 72, noted novelist and anthropologist, died Saturday at St. Helen's Hospital here.

Born in London, he went to New Zealand in 1894, where he practiced surgery. He served in World War I, receiving two decorations.

After the war he retired from medicine to take up social studies, publishing such works as "The Making of Humanity," "Rational Evolution" and "The Decline and Fall of the British Empire."

His first novel, "Europa," was published in 1935. Other novels included "Fandango" and "The New Life of Mr. Martin."

Eugene F. Ford

Low requiem mass for Eugene F. Ford, 53, managing director and stage producer for Loew's Capitol Theater, who died on Sunday, will be said at 10 a. m. today in St. Thomas the Apostle Catholice Church, 27th st. and Woodley rd. nw.

The Rev. Joseph Moran will officiate and burial will follow in Fort Lincoln Cemetery.

Some Newcomers Are Welcomed at the Zoo

C. K. Matson, Publicist of Cancer, Dies

Cleveland, Dec. 13 (AP).—Carlton K. Matson, editorial writer who made his own cancer a plea for research and enlightenment, died today. He was 58.

Matson, chief editorial writer of the Cleveland Press and longtime Scripps-Howard newspaper executive, succumbed to the cancer that made his editorial "strictly personal but important to everybody" nationally known.

He brought his own ailment to public notice in plain, frank language, and added:

"What I want to do is to strike a blow against this mysterious paralyzing hush-hush that surrounds every case of cancer. I don't want anybody having to ask about me, 'Does he know what he's got?' . . . Yes, I've been told and I know."

Reader's Digest magazine printed the column in its November issue.

Former Toast Of Broadway Dies in Miami

Miami, Fla., Dec. 13 (AP).—Princess Lucy Cotton Eristavi-Tchitcherine, five times married former toast of Broadway and owner of the Macfadden-Deauville Hotel, Miami Beach, died last night from what police said was an apparent overdose of sleeping tablets.

Princess Eristavi

Police said an empty sleeping pill bottle was found in her bedroom.

The princess who was about 55, obtained her title from her fifth husband, exiled Russian Prince Vladimer Eristavi - Tchitcherine. She obtained a divorce from him in 1944.

Born in Houston, Tex., she went to New York in her teens and joined the chorus of "The Quaker Girl." A few years later she was starred in the Broadway play "Up in Mabel's Room."

Her first marriage in 1924 to Edward Russell Thomas, publisher of the New York Morning Telegraph, ended two years later on his death. He left an estimated 27 million dollars in a trust fund.

In 1927 she married Col. Lytton Ament, a close friend of former President Herbert Hoover. Three years later she married Charles Hann, and in 1932 she married William M. McGraw, a former newspaperman. These three marriages all ended in divorce.

Pierson Rites To Be Held Wednesday

Funeral services for Albert H. Pierson, 71, retired Agriculture Department economist who died last Sunday, will be held Wednesday at 1 p. m. in Lee funeral home, 4th and Massachusetts ave. ne. Burial will be in Orange, N. J.

Mr. Pierson, an expert on lumber distribution and consumption, died in Providence Hospital following an illness of two months. His home was at 1618 Riggs pl. nw.

A native or Orange, N. J., he was graduated in 1899 from Princeton University, attended the Yale school of forestry and studied for approximately a year in Germany.

He joined the Forest Service of the Agriculture Department about 1916, as a member of its forest economic division. For many years before his retirement about 1946, he assembled material for the Government's periodic statistical bulletins on lumber distribution and use in the United States.

Mr. Pierson, who never married, leaves three cousins in this city, Miss Mary McNair, Miss Harriet Pierson and Miss Mary Jessup, all of 900 E. Capitol st.

Funeral Rites Set Today for Comdr. Wilson

Funeral services for Commander Stanley L. Wilson, 57, USN (retired), will be held at 3 p. m. today at the Fort Myer Chapel followed by rites in Arlington National Cemetery.

Commander Wilson died Friday at the Naval Hospital in Houston, Tex.

A native of West Roxbury, Mass., he attended the Naval Academy, graduating in 1914. During the war he taught naval science and tactics at the naval training school at Harvard University. In 1944 he was transferred to Washington and stationed first at the Potomac River Naval Command and then in the office of the Chief of Naval Operations. He was retired in March, 1945.

Building Man Shot Fatally At Home Here

Edgar D. Boling, 52-year-old building contractor, was shot fatally with a .22-caliber rifle yesterday at his home, 201 Bryant st. ne.

Police, who went to the home about 4 p. m. in response to a call from a neighbor, found Boling in the dining room with a gunshot wound in the roof of his mouth and the rifle lying nearby.

He died at Casualty Hospital at 5:10 p. m.

Police said Boling's wife, alarmed when her husband came home with the rifle, called a neighborhood child from her upstairs bedroom window and asked that police be notified. She was unaware of the shooting, however, until police arrived, police said.

Police quoted her as saying her husband had been worried about financial matters and had been "periodically depressed" since he lost his right leg as the result of a fall from a roof about two years ago.

Arlington Drops School Deal With Baltimore Firm

The Arlington County School Board last night called off negotiations with the firm of Smith & Veale, Baltimore architects, for plans and specifications of the projected Fairlington Elementary School.

A board spokesman said the action was taken after the board learned that the Baltimore firm is not registered in Virginia. Last week five architectural firms, one of them Smith & Wesle, were selected to draw up blueprints for the county's $6,500,000 school construction program.

Dr. Barnard Joy, chairman of the board, said the action "will in no way delay the construction program" of the Fairlington school.

Death of Boy Due to Brain Injury Probed

Police yesterday were investigating the death of a 13-year-old boy who died Sunday night at Gallinger Hospital of a brain hemorrhage.

Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald said the youth, Albert Brown, of 1029 30th st. nw., died of a hemorrhage caused by a blow. The injury might have been received if the boy was struck or if he fell, he said.

Police said they learned from the family that the youth had been involved in a number of fights with other boys over a long period of time. The family also told police that he had suffered headaches and nose bleeds for the last four years.

A brother of the boy reported to police that several boys attempted to rob Albert of a dollar Saturday night, when he was on his way to a nearby store to have the bill changed. The brother said there was no exchange of blows at that time, however.

Col. R. C. Williams

Col. Robert C. Williams, 58, former chief of operations and training in the Office of the Chief of Army Engineers, was buried yesterday in Arlington Cemetery.

Col. Williams

Colonel Williams died unexpectedly Thursday at his home in Asheville, N. C. His mother, Mrs. R. D. Williams, and brother, W. Raymond Williams, communications chief for the Atomic Energy Commission, live at 891 N. Harrison st., Arlington.

A graduate of The Citadel, Charleston, S. C., Colonel Williams was commissioned in the infantry in 1912, served in World War I in the Thirty-sixth Infantry and in the Ninth Division's machine-gun battalion. He was Army district engineer at Vicksburg, St. Paul and in Hawaii, and was engineer instructor with the National Guard in North and South Carolina.

In World War II he was chief of engineer training at Fort Leonard Wood, Jefferson Barracks, Camp Swift and Camp Claiborne. He was a graduate of the Command and General Staff School at the Army War College.

Falls Church Suing On School Control

Ward President

Falls Church Annexation Group Elects

Harold A. Ward, of Tremont Gardens, Fairfax County, last night was elected chairman of a permanent citizens' committee to study Falls Church annexation proposals.

Ward, chairman of the Tremont Gardens Citizens Association Annexation Committee, was elected at a meeting of 16 persons representing eight citizens' associations in the area affected by the proposed annexation.

At last night's organization meeting, the committee made no provisions to limit membership and indicated it would be expanded to include representatives of other civic groups.

The newly formed group appointed subcommittees to study three phases of the annexation plan and indicated other subcommittees would be appointed later.

Subcommittee appointments were as follows: legal: Maj. James R. Mills and Mario Cozantino, both of Jefferson Village Citizens Association; Kenneth Swiger, Devonshire Gardens; David Walter, Greenway Downs.

Schools: John J. Crowley, Brilyn Park; James Neilson, Tyler Park; Eugene Thompson, Greenway Downs.

Planning and Zoning: J. J. Guerard, Lee Boulevard Heights; E. J. M. Delaney, Brilyn Park;

Roads and Sanitation: Robert Ricketts, Sleepy Hollow.

The Falls Church City Council last night authorized the filing of a test suit to determine whether the city shall get control of its school system.

City Attorney LaRue Van Meter, who is preparing the suit, said it will be filed "probably some time this week" against Fairfax County, which now operates the three Falls Church schools as a part of the county system.

Basic claim in the action, according to Van Meter, is that the McCandlish Act, passed in the Virginia General Assembly in 1942, is unconstitutional. It was under this act that Falls Church transferred its schools to Fairfax.

In another action, the council agreed to hire the Bartholomew Associates, of St. Louis, a firm of planning engineers, to conduct a $2500 preliminary annexation survey.

This marks the first formal move in a possible Falls Church bid to annex some seven square miles of adjoining Fairfax County. If the preliminary survey shows annexation is feasible, the council probably will authorize an additional $2500 for a full-dress survey and court action.

Councilman J. H. McCarthy, chairman of the council's annexation committee, said the Bartholomew bid was $9000 less than any other received for the complete survey.

Mayor Albert M. Orme was asked by the council to appoint a Falls Church charter commission of 10 members to advise the council whether help from the University of Virginia experts is needed to draw up a new city charter.

Van Meter said the present charter, drawn in 1946, is "weak in spots" and that a new version should be developed to present to a possible special session of the General Assembly this winter.

2 Indians Admit Raping D. C. Wife Found in Wreck

Gallup, N. Mex., Dec. 13 (AP).—Two Navajo Indians pleaded guilty in Justice Court to raping a white woman while she lay semiconscious by the highway after an auto accident early today.

State Patrolman Dave Jackson identified the woman as the wife of a Washington, D. C., man. He said the husband was unconscious in the wrecked car.

The Indians—Juan Vandeveer and Sterling Clark—were taken immediately to Santa Fe for sentencing in District Court.

Jackson said signed statements by the Indians recounted they were returning to their homes with a bottle of wine, were attracted by the woman's moans, and attacked her before reporting the accident.

4 Men Arrested On Streets Face Lottery Charges

Vice squad detectives arrested four men at three different northwest corners yesterday on charges of operating a lottery and possessing lottery slips.

William G. Sachis, 50, of 1303 H st. nw., who said he is a mechanic, was picked up at 1:30 p. m. at 10th st. and New York ave. Detectives said they observed him accepting horse race bets. They charged him additionally with setting up a gaming table. His bail was set at $2500.

An hour later James E. Woolfolk, 33, of 1533 10th st. nw., and James Gaynor, 25, of 722 12th st. ne., were arrested at 8th and M sts. nw. Clinton W. Timberlake, 43, of 1229 H st. nw., was arrested police said, at 7th and O sts. nw., at 4:20 p. m. Woolfolk, Gaynor and Timberlake were held in $1500 bonds each.

Academy Presents America's Award To Dr. Del Rio

A Mexican scholar, Dr. Martinez del Rio, was honored last night by the Academy of American Franciscan History of Washington for "his spiritual and cultural contribution toward promoting inter-American goodwill."

Martinez del Rio

He was presented the Americas Award for 1948 by the Rev. Alexander Wyse, OFM, director of the academy, at a ceremony in Pilgrimage Hall of the Franciscan Monastery, 14th and Quincy sts. ne. Dr. del Rio is professor of history and archaeology at the National University, Mexico City.

The honor, last conferred upon Sumner Welles, former Undersecretary of State, is offered by the academy's magazine, the Americas, for outstanding work in inter-American relations.

Postlude

Henbest Mastery Displayed

By Paul Hume

Fanny Ross Henbest played an excellent list of compositions last night in her Phillips Gallery concert.

A Schubert Impromptu and one of our favorite Beethoven sonatas were her pre-intermission tributes to the nineteenth century. From then on, American composers held the entire stage. Five of these were represented in music showing universally fine mastery of the instrument in a variety of styles and moods.

Charles Tomlinson Griffes remains as interesting a composer today as when his personal exploitation of impressionist harmonies first surprised American listeners. His vocabulary is sufficiently his own to be recognized in almost any of his works. His Night Winds provided the recitalist with one of her best moments. Of Susannah Coleman's two familiar pieces, the Missal Theme (taken from an offertory for the 28th of December) stood out as worthy of place on any list.

Theodore Chanler's Toccata could have more virtuosity in its annunciation than Mrs. Henbest brought to it, but she outlined its essential characteristics with skill and fleet passage work.

Principal novelties of the program were a Sonatina by Wendell Keeney, and a Dance Set of Ray Green. Keeney was a member of what must have been an outstanding group of Americans studying in Fontainebleau in 1938. His music is crisp, aware of American syncopation, highly idiomatic, and successful in every way. It was one of the best played works of the entire list.

Ray Green reminds us of Claude Debussy, who liked to sign his music, "Claude Debussy, French musician." Green delights in naming things, "An American Rigaudon," or "An American Bourree." This is justifiable practice in a day when European music is still played far more than our native product. What is more important is that Green's music is its own declaration of nationality. He derives inspiration from folk and popular dance rhythms of today and understands the shape and sound of our own songs well enough to incorporate them into some ingenious writing of his own.

His Dance Set sounds well and was well played. In Schubert and Beethoven, the artist showed a fine sense of lyrical control. Her announcement of the first movement of the late sonata in E Major, Opus 101, was pure joy. If rhythmic irregularities were eliminated from her work, it would enjoy greater ease of projection.

Talks Slated By Archbishop And Barkley

Pre-Christmas addresses tonight by Senator Alben W. Barkley, Vice President-elect of the United States, and the Most Rev. Patrick A. O'Boyle, Archbishop of the Washington Catholic Archdiocese, will highlight the start of a round of Yuletide events for the city.

Both are scheduled at the yearly pre-Christmas meeting of the Washington Board of Trade at 8 p. m. in the main ballroom of the Mayflower Hotel.

Included in the program is a speech by Melvin Hildreth, chairman of the Presidential Inaugural Committee, and a 30-minute presentation of traditional Christmas music by the Sulpician Seminary Choir of Catholic University.

The meeting will be presided over by board President Leon Chatelain, jr., and will be followed by buffet refreshments.

Two other Chistmas parties are to be held today, and many others are scheduled for the remainder of the week.

At the University of Maryland, members of the French Club will hold a Christmas party at 8 p. m. in the Armory Lounge to prepare a giant album of Christmas cheer for orphan students at Ecole Gambetta Rethel, Ardennes, France.

Following compilation of the album, headed by a letter of greeting from the university president, Harry C. Byrd, the group will hear an address, "La Noel en France" and will sing French Christmas carols.

Students of Dunbarton College of Holy Cross will carry their Christmas spirit to 74 orphans at the St. Joseph's Home and School at 7:30 o'clock tonight. A Santa Claus, puppet show, gifts and carols will be on their program of entertainment.

Home Building In S. E. Urged By Park Head

Increased residential development in Southeast Washington was urged last night by Gen. U. S. Grant 3d, chairman of the National Capital Park and Planning Commission.

At a meeting of the Southeast Business Men's Association, Grant pointed out that the Southeast section, originally intended to be the main residential section, has remained dormant for nearly 15 years.

The meeting was held at 314 Pennsylvania ave. se.

Grant outlined the Commission's plan for erecting new Government buildings along East Capitol st. as a means of stimulating Southeast residential development, and declared, in the next five years, permanent abodes will be needed here for 20,000 to 25,000 Federal employes now housed in temporary or rented buildings.

The Southeast, he suggested, should get its share of the new residences.

Christmas Seal Fund Stands at $72,500

The Christmas Seal fund drive of the District of Columbia Tuberculosis Association has collected $72,500 to date, Mrs. C. D. Lowe, association president, announced yesterday. The drive, which began November 22, will continue through Christmas.

Mrs. Lowe explained the success of the drive is urgent to carry out the association's work during 1949, when it plans to expand its year-round services to meet needs growing out of the recent chest X-ray survey.

Right to Year's Pay For Veteran Is Upheld

Supreme Court yesterday held in effect that the GI Bill of Rights empowers a court to award a veteran a year's pay if, on his release from the service, his old employer did not give him back his prewar job. The court refused to review lower court decisions ordering John Kivo & Co. of New York City to pay $7956 to Fred Loeb.

Russian Ambassador Confined With Cold

Soviet Ambassador Alexander S. Panyushkin is confined to his bed with a cold, an embassy spokesman said yesterday. He was unable to appear last night at a Madison Square Garden rally in New York, where he was scheduled to speak.

The spokesman said Panyushkin's condition is not serious.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Woman Is Vexed With Man Who Hires Only Pretty Girls for His Office and Claims Right to Stare at Pretty Girl Anywhere

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Here in Anchorage, Alaska, we read your column, and I would like you to analyze the attitude of a man I've known for years. He's not my beau, just an acquaintance; and I've told him I would write to you, but he thinks you will laugh at me.

Floyd manages an office staff of about 35 girls and hires only the prettiest applicants. He says girls who aren't pretty shouldn't apply for office work; and that I resent. He also tells the girls to call him by his nickname; and he flatly states that he always takes a good look at any pretty girl; and "I don't mean a casual glance," he says.

He says all men, even married men, do that; and if he were married and out with his wife, he'd still take notice of pretty girls. He says there's no disrespect to a wife in doing so, and that she shouldn't care. I challenge that. I say that no woman could be happy with him, or any man, who acted on his views—but he's conceited enough to stand his ground.

Is Man Smart as He Thinks?

I DON'T think any man who loved his wife, or considered the feelings of a woman companion, would crane his neck at every pretty girl; and as for myself, when I'm in a man's company, I don't want to be treated as poor second-best, in competition for his interest, if a pretty girl appears.

Recently, for example, Floyd and I were walking together when I noticed him gazing intently ahead, smiling broadly. Then I saw the girl. He stopped, planted himself in front of her, started talking and was so entranced that he forgot me, and I went on without him. Whenever a pretty girl appears on the horizon, he loses interest in all else. Later he told me the girl had worked for him once.

Floyd thinks he's smart and wise; but is he? Is it true that every man takes a good look at every pretty girl; and that wife, sweetheart or female companion who objects is wrong? Please advise. E. B.

Man's Behavoir Far From Mature

DEAR E. B.: The man, married or single, who "takes a good look" at every pretty girl isn't paying tribute to beauty, but rather manifesting avid preoccupation with sex phantasies, a form of autoeroticism that characterizes infantile personalities.

In brief, he is advertising neurotic incompetence to negotiate a normal adult pattern of behavior, in relation to love and/or sex. With him, fancied amours in which self-gratification is "dreamed of" as paramount are utilized as far-fetched substitutes for bona-fide matehood.

Thus there is a brash element of prurient curiosity, plus a crude, childish indirect bid for attention (from the pretty girl), implicit in the ogler's performance. In taking "a good look" at the girl, he is fancying conquest of her; and at the same time trying to compel her notice, as if to assure himself that she would respond if he advanced.

All of which marks him an embarrassing boor, as squire or husband, to the woman of educated insight, or one whose intuition tells her the central truth of things.

Pathetic Fellow; But Why Bother?

ON THE OTHER hand, most men of civilized quality have a misty ideal of feminine loveliness enshrined at heart, but they don't chase will-o'-the-wisps to find it. Rather in process of maturing they fix contentedly on a companion who is a reasonable approximation of heart's desire and develop emotional treasure in relation to her that they wouldn't trade for any other.

Now and again such men may encounter a girl or woman, not wife or sweetheart, whose guise suggests the enshrined ideal. Something of beauty about her—of bearing, coloring or gracious congenial aura,—may smite their attention and evoke an involuntary second look; but this reaction doesn't "break the connection" of the mature civilized man's customary active regard for the familiar companion whose worth he knows.

Thus from my view Floyd is pathetic, but it's probably futile to wrestle with his defensive arguments. So, for advice, turn your attention to more "adult" men and let him ogle for what it's worth to him. M. H.

The Gift Box

By Sonia Stein

IT'S a nerve-wracking experience to shop for jewelry if you're not sure that what you hang on the Christmas tree will make the recipient's eyes light up.

It's such an expensive mistake to make! But it's always safe to buy pearls in any form. Women love them. The girl who has a single strand would like to own a bib of three or four strands. The irregularly shaped baroque pearls in both gray and white are being shown this season and make an interesting variation on a lovely theme.

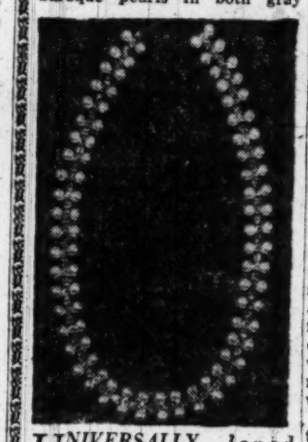
When pearls are strung together and made into lace-like collars they are perfect gifts for graceful throats.

IF you are shopping for the girl who "has everything," why not buy her a pretty box to put it all in? There are gold-tooled leather boxes in all sizes, hand-painted wooden boxes, silver boxes, plastic boxes. And don't feel it's an empty gift, so to speak, because a nice box is expensive and will probably be very welcome.

SHOPPING for the man who has everything?

Why not the jewelry he needs for his evening shirt? Studs and cuff links are things that men seldom bother to buy for themselves unless the emergency arises. And it happens that more men are wearing French cuffs on their shirts for day wear than has been true for many years, so the cuff links will do double duty.

If he wears a belt, an initialed belt buckle might please him very much. (Are you going to be smart and have it initialled AFTER Christmas just in case he'd like to exchange it?)



UNIVERSALLY loved pearls, combined with rhinestones, make an attractive Christmas gift

Miss Hennock To Give Tea For FCC Wives

Miss Frieda B. Hennock, first woman member of the Federal Communications Commission, will be hostess Wednesday afternoon at a reception for the wives of other members of the commission, and for women in all departments at the commission.

Miss Hennock, who was a prominent New York attorney before her appointment to the federal position, has invited women members of the press to meet the FCC group, and has also invited wives of the Supreme Court justices, of the cabinet members and of officials in other departments.

The only men present will be Miss Hennock's fellow commissioners and one or two other "special male guests."

Commissioners wives being honored at the tea are Mrs. Wayne Coy, wife of the chairman of the FCC; Mrs. Edward M. Webster, Mrs. Rosel H. Hyde, Mrs. Robert F. Jones, Mrs. George E. Sterling and Mrs. Paul A. Walker.

The tea will be held at the Raleigh Hotel from 5 to 7 p. m.

Hollins Students Plan Home Visits

Among the Hollins College students who will return to their homes in the Washington area for the Christmas holidays are Miss Janet R. Gilchrist, Miss True Nash, Miss Marjorie Ann Ramsey, Miss Eugunia M. Schwartz, Miss Annie Laurie Bernard, Miss Catherine Lee DuBois, Miss Louise H. Leahy and Miss Mary H. M. Wilcox.

Their vacation begins on December 17 and continues through January 5.

Brazilian Navy Day Celebrated

NAVY DAY of Brazil was celebrated yesterday at a reception given by the Brazilian Naval Attache and Mme. Attila Ache in the Continental Room of the Wardman Park Hotel. Over 300 guests were received by the host and hostess between the hours of 6:30 and 8:30 o'clock.

Fall flowers decorated the room and supper was served from long buffet tables. Hors d'oeuvres and cocktails were passed and for supper there was a delectable selection of hams, turkeys, roasts of beef, salads and small cakes and ices.

Admiral and Mme. Ache received their guests at the entrance assisted by their daughter, Miss Yvonne Ache. The latter wore a long green dinner dress with narrow band of silver around the neckline, and Mme. Ache was costumed in black crepe embroidered in silver sequins.

Earlier in the day, Admiral Ache and the Brazilian Ambassador, Mauricio Nabuco, went to Arlington Cemetery and placed some flowers in the tomb of Admiral Theodore Vogelsang, who was the first chief of the American Naval Mission in Brazil.

The Ambassador was at the party last evening, dressed in black tie before going on to a dinner party.

Admiral and Mrs. Louis E. Denfeld attended the party, sitting at a table with Admiral William D. Leahy. Other Navy officials invited to the reception included the Secretary of the Navy and Mrs. John L. Sullivan, Vice Admiral and Mrs. Arthur D. Struble, Rear Admiral and Mrs. Hewlett Thebaud, Rear Admiral and Mrs. Charles Wellborn and Rear Admiral and Mrs. James L. Holloway, jr.

Guests from the Army department were Gen. and Mrs. Robert L. Walsh and Gen. and Mrs. L. Mathewson. Diplomatic representatives from the Brazilian Embassy included Antonio Castello Branco, Gen. and Mrs. Gervasio Duncan, Miss Elys Lott, Dr. and Mrs. Mario da Camara, Ambassador and Mrs. Jose Maria Belo, Jorge de Carvalhoe Silva, Mr. and Mrs. Carlero Rodriguez, Mr. and Mrs. Jose Garrido Torres and many others.

From the Department of State came Mr. and Mrs. Paul C. Daniels, Mr. and Mrs. Robert F. Woodward, Mr. and Mrs. DuWayne G. Clark, Mr. and Mrs. Harold M. Midkiff, Mr. and Mrs. Allen Dawson and Mrs. Thomas C. Dawson.

For Holiday Parties—or Trimming the Tree

GOWNS suitable for Christmas Eve, whether you go a-dancing or stay home to trim the tree, were among those shown yesterday at the last of the pre-holiday Monday fashion shows in the Embassy Room of the Statler Hotel. The "Fashion Fair" will be resumed January 10, with Mrs. Gladstone Williams and Austine again in charge.

One attractive stay-at-home gown shown yesterday was of pale bittersweet crepe with a graceful half-sash lined with matching lame.

For after-dark occasions, there was a halter neck black faille dress with a dotted swiss stole. The edge of the stole was a profusion of accordion pleats.

Another dressy costume was cerise taffetta covered with black chiffon. The bare taffeta peeks out at the center of the bodice, and is used for a wide crushed belt and lavish stole.

A navy blue quilted taffeta house coat over shocking pink satin trousers was suggested for a holiday at home.

There were costumes there for almost every occasion, including one no designer would ever dream of. A "heavenly blue" taffeta dress had the approval of Pat McGerr, young author of mystery novels, who was among those at the celebrity table with Mrs. William O. Douglas. But what do you suppose she approved it for? A murder!

The lady victim in Miss McGerr's current mystery work is to be stabbed in the back, right next to a bow over one hip. After some futile search, Miss McGerr has found the dress with a bow, right where the bow has to be.

Fashions shown yesterday were from Frances & Frances, Elizabeth Shepherd, Joan Roberts, Mme. Chautemps, Jandel Furs, Inc., and William Allen Shoes.

St. Lucia's Fete Is Colorful

ST. LUCIA'S DAY was celebrated yesterday at a party given by the Swedish First Secretary and Mme. Malmaeus at their house on McGill Terrace. The Swedish saint of light was impersonated by Mme. Westerberg, wife of the Assistant Air Attache.

Dressed in long white robe and wearing a crown of lighted candles, St. Lucia appeared promptly at 8 o'clock, attended by the three children of the host and hostess, Inga-Britt, age 8; Carl, 7, and Jan, 5. Each child wore a long white gown and long pointed cone-shape cap with star and each carried a white candle.

After the arrival of St. Lucia, which in Sweden heralds the return of longer winter days, the party started off with mulled wine. A smoergaasbord supper followed and later there was dancing. Most of the embassy staff members and their wives attended the colorful fete.

Falcks Entertain At Cocktails, Supper

MR. AND MRS. EDWARD FALCK invited a number of friends in for cocktails and buffet supper Sunday afternoon from 5:30 on. The party was given at their house in Chevy Chase, 9 Grafton st. Among the guests were the Secretary of the Interior and Mrs. J. A. Krug, Maj. Gen. and Mrs. Guy V. Henry, the Assistant Secretary of the Interior and Mrs. C. Girard Davidson, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Middleton Hill, Charles Patrick Clark, the Undersecretary of the Interior and Mrs. Oscar L. Chapman, Mr. and Mrs. William Milton, Mr. and Mrs. T. J. Washington Wits Busy With Pumpkin Jingles, After-The-Gridiron Tales

By Mary Van Rensselaer Thayer

GRIDIRON GIDDITIES splashed through the press for the nonce made our Nation jingle—as well as pumpkin— conscious. So here's a nonsense hangover, combining both, which is hummed in high halls hereabouts.

"Thomas Thomas J. Parnell
Found his headlines shot to . . .
Got hisself a pumpkin shell
Now he's doing very well!"

Story of a 'Tail Hunt'

THE GRIDION dinner, stag of course, is strictly a white tie and tails function. Hotels housing the 500 guests did big business pants pressing. Inevitably, a few "tails" went astray. No joking matter, however, was the disappearance, during a 36-hour period, of Gridiron President Phelps Adams' complete glad-rag outfit. Around 6 p. m. Manufacturer Sam Keller, and Detroit News executive vice president Bill Scripps (who with their respective wives, shared a suite in the same hotel) started to dress. Digging into closets, they found two tail coats in one, a single in the pocket. In a trice the valet popped up, hair rumpled, haggard after a daylong "tail" hunt. Meanwhile, tailors had been summoned, all was in readiness to sew Adams into the hotel manager's soup and fish!

Brush Parties

EMBASSIES AND diplomats in general are subject to all sorts of rackets, some amusing, some otherwise. One of the newest, most incredible is a series of what might well be termed "Brush Parties." A feminine representative of a well-known brush concern gathers together ladies in lower diplomatic echelons, arranges afternoon entertainments. Sometimes those invited pay to cover refreshments, sometimes fun is free but at all times the brush lady gets in her lick, shows off her wares. Until recently her get-togethers have escaped publicity, evidently being enjoyed by foreigners possibly a trifle lonely. Last week she made her first mistake, called one of the more important embassies, asked for the Ambassadress' secretary, wanted to know if the ladies there would be interested in her impressarioing. They weren't.

Envoy Cites Italy's Problems In Talk to Democratic Women

By Genevieve Reynolds

THE ITALIAN AMBASSADOR, Alberto Tarchiani, yesterday blamed Soviet Russia's veto for excluding his country from membership in the United Nations. He spoke at a luncheon of the Women's National Democratic Club at club headquarters.

"When I came here in 1945, I had three principal aims—to restore friendship between the United States and Italy, to work for a just peace, and obtain U. N. membership for Italy," the envoy explained. The first mission, he said, has been entirely fulfilled, but "just peace hasn't come as expected, nor have we gained U. N. membership."

He told the large audience that failure to get U. N. membership was because "Russia three times vetoed the application."

Despite the lack of a just peace treaty and U. N. admission, the Italian people, he said, are working toward a new destiny in helping to preserve Western Christianity and democracy.

Production Up

Envoy Tarchiani gave full credit to United States aid in restoring Italian production. "Production has been restored 75 per cent due to your country's aid through UNRRA and the Marshall Plan," he explained. "Achievements, however, also were made possible through the willingness and good spirit of the Italian people."

Discussing several of Italy's main problems, he listed overpopulation and unemployment as the two principal ones.

"The Marshall Plan can provide only 300,000 jobs per year," he asserted. "That leaves 2,500,000 unemployed. It's among the unemployed that you find the seeds for communism.

"Communism, however, is not as strong as it could be in our country," he continued. "Most of our people are sensible and know that communism won't solve the country's problems."

Overpopulation Problem

Overpopulation is Italy's big general problem, he pointed out, and suggested two possible remedies, viz., immigration, and a workable compromise whereby Italians can work their old lands in the colonies. Effective immigration would mean the migration of 350,000 Italians yearly to other countries, he said. Drawbacks are finding empty lands and transportation, but Ambassador Tarchiani expressed hope that plans could be worked out for the immigrants to settle on some of the empty land in South Africa, South America and Australia.

"Italy has the same territorial area as New Mexico—about 120 square miles," he said. Population in Italy is 147 million and in New Mexico about 530,000. One third of our country is mountainous and only 20% of the land can be cultivated. Whereas, France has 44% and Great Britain 48% cultivatable."

Other means for integrating the economic life of the country are development of navigation, so many people can live and make their livelihoods at sea and from tourist trade, the Ambassador said.

Asked to comment on the Italian-British controversy over the former's prewar African colonies, Ambassador Tarchiani expressed a hope that the question soon will be settled between the two countries." "I firmly believe a friendly, understanding compromise can be worked out," he averred.

Plans for Inaugural

Mrs. J. Borden Harriman, club president, presided, and asked for volunteers to aid the inaugural committe in inspecting rental rooms. "We're expecting three quarters of a million people for the inaugural ceremonies," she said.

Mrs. Edward Meigs announced that the President and Mrs. Truman will be guests of honor at the Woman's National Democratic Club's $10-a-plate dinner, February 11, in the Mayflower Hotel.

Guests at the head table included Mme. Tarchiani, wife of the speaker; Mrs. Cordell Hull wife of the former Secretary of State, Mr. and Mrs. Norman Littell, Mrs. George Becker, Mrs. Edward Sturdevant, Mrs. Carroll Greenaugh, Mrs. Milene Home and Mrs. Thomas W. Cooke.

On the Club Front . . .

Members of the D. C. Federation of Women's Clubs yesterday indorsed a resolution opposing the United States Department of Interior's potential control over District playgrounds and other recreation centers and favoring keeping playgrounds under the jurisdiction of the D. C. Recreation Board. Action was taken at the organization's monthly meeting held at the Hamilton Hotel.

Originated by the Federation of Citizens Associations, the resolution is designed to keep the city's recreational activities under District officials. An affiliate of the citizens' group, the D. C. FWC, gave its support to the measure.

During the business session, the Dollology Club was admitted into federation membership. Mrs. Frank Mulkern, extension department chairman, presented the group's application for federation affiliation.

A T. B. bond was purchased by the club to aid with the current tuberculosis fund drive. Christmas music was furnished by soloists Mrs. James Stone and Mrs. Clara May Walthers.

About Care of Dining Room Suite

What care should I give a bleached mahogany dining suite? Do I use ordinary furniture polish? What kind of wax, if any?
MRS. D.

You can use either a cream or colorless furniture polish or wax. The use of wax will enable you to build up a protective coating which would be more resistant to moisture and wear than can be built up by using the polish. If you use wax, choose a wax which has no color and apply it very thinly, buffing well after it has dried thoroughly.

I am planning on painting the walls in my home. These walls have been papered in the past and I am faced with the problem of removing this old paper. The ceilings have one layer and the side walls two. If you could tell me a solution available for removing wall paper it would be helpful, or any method for accomplishing this job. C. M. S.

Wallpaper can be removed by first thoroughly soaking it with warm water to which has been added a handful of washing soda to each gallon of water. To apply the water to the paper use a sponge, wide brush or insect sprayer. Begin at one corner and work in vertical stripes, continuing until the entire wall has been moistened. With several thickness of paper, several applications of water will be needed with time allowed to soak through to the bottom layer of the paste. When using washing soda in the water for moistening, be sure to protect woodwork and painted surfaces in the room, for the solution will ruin the finish.

When the water has had time to soak the paper thoroughly, rip the paper off, starting at the tip. Any places which stick can be scraped off with a broad putty knife. Sponge the wall with clear, warm water to remove all paste when the paper is entirely off.

I have some pictures I wish to put on either the kitchen or bathroom walls. They are on heavy paper and I wish to put them flat on the wall and protect them with some kind of finish.
W. A. M.

If these pictures are prints, you could give them a protective finish by applying a coat of clear shellac. If they are original oils or water colors, I would suggest you take them to a qualified picture restorer for his advice about protecting them.

The shade of one of my floor lamps has darkened through accumulation of dust. It is made of a silk-like fabric. Is there any way of cleaning that shade without ruining the material or causing it to shrink or discolor?

If the fabric is sewed to the frame and not glued, you can probably improve the appearance of the shade by shampooing it. Since it isn't possible to know just how a shade fabric will react to washing until attempted, you are always running some risk in shampooing a shade. But if the shade is unusable as it is, it seems you have everything to gain in attempting it.

Fill a laundry or bath tub with lukewarm water and add a generous amount of mild soap flakes. Whip up a good suds. Hold the shade by the top of the frame and plunge it up and down in the suds. If soiled spots show up, brush them gently with a soft brush. When the shade is clean, rinse by plunging up and down in clear water. Rinse twice to be sure to get out all of the soap. Now, pat away all the moisture you can with a clean bath towel. Hang out-of-doors or turn an electric fan directly on it to dry. One secret of success is to dry it quickly so that the wire frame cannot rust onto the cover.

If the shade has any trimming on it which might fade or be damaged by washings, remove it before washing. It can be replaced when the shade is dry, or new trimming purchased and put on.

For Your Christmas Candy Collection

Full of dried fruits and covered with nuts are French Bars, a delicious addition to your Christmas candy collection.

FRENCH BARS

1 cup figs	2 tablespoons lemon juice
1 cup seeded raisins	1 tablespoon orange juice
1 cup pitted dates	12 maraschino cherries
½ cup shredded coconut	Granulated sugar
Grated rind of 2 oranges	Ground nut meats

Put figs, raisins, and dates through food chopper. Combine with coconut, fruit juices, and rind. Blend thoroughly. Work in the cherries, cut into small pieces, being careful not to mash them. Press into a bar 1-inch square and cut into ½-inch pieces. Roll each piece in granulated sugar, dust with ground nut meats, and place on waxed paper to dry. This recipe makes 4 dozen bars.

Cooking Cues . . .

When heating leftover lamb slices in any of the remaining gravy pep up the gravy by adding a little finely grated onion, a dash of Worcestershire sauce and a few grains of sugar.

Use ample fat when frying eggs, but do not get the fat so hot that it sputters when the eggs are put into the skillet. Cook over low heat and spoon some of the fat over the top of the eggs until a film forms and they reach the degree of doneness desired.

Garnish vanilla tapioca pudding with tangerine sections and a little of the shredded rind.

Flavor hard sauce for holiday puddings with molasses and cinnamon, or add a little shredded lemon or orange rind.

Baked stuffed potatoes are particularly delicious when a little finely grated onion is added to the stuffing along with butter or margarine, salt, freshly ground pepper, paprika and hot milk.

To make banana fritters to serve with baked ham or luncheon meat split large ripe but firm bananas in lengthwise halves and cut across again. Roll each quarter in flour and saute or fry in deep fat.

The First Step Is Easy—The Rest Is Practice

Glamorous Goldwyn Girls Give Beauty Secrets

By Ida Jean Kain

IF FILMLAND'S fabulous Sam Goldwyn were to beckon you to Hollywood, you'd first go through their finishing school. Today's column gives away the secrets of that glamorous curriculum.

The keynote is persistence, according to the experts. Glamour is one part natural prettiness and 10 parts practice. Then it gets to be habit.

It seems the first step is mental—you must want to be glamorous. That doesn't mean wishful day-dreaming, mind you. Desire has to be backed up with the will-to-do. Once you make up your mind to start and finish a remodeling regime, nothing can stop you.

Formula for Beauty

Beauty and bewitchment, say the specialists, are made up of a lot of things, including . . .

GOOD GROOMING: establish a regular program for policing your person and your personal effects. Hollywood defines a well-groomed gal as one who's ready to look her best on 20 minutes notice—any 20.

LOVELY POSTURE: whatever you do, do it gracefully, smoothly and with an economy of motion.

A TRIM FIGURE: cut the calories if you want to cut a slimmer figure, and do homework in specific exercises for redistribution of weight. You've heard that one before!

A WELL-CHOSEN WARDROBE: never buy what's in style if it isn't your style. Classical, uncluttered clothes should form your wardrobe's basis.

A PLEASING VOICE: on this point the Hollywood experts really bear down. Voice improvement may take training, for an ideal voice must possess pleasant pitch, colorful modulation, clear enunciation and correct accent—and must not be too loud.

SOMETHING TO SAY: no use speaking up in your loveliest tones unless you're alert and well-informed.

And now—maybe it isn't what you expected in a glamour course, but the major emphasis is on good health. I purposely didn't put health first . . . you might have stopped reading. Those gorgeous Goldwyn Girls look that way because they pay close attention to good nutrition, healthy exercise, and sleep.

To every glamour student, the professors assign a half-hour of open-air exercise each day—see, those figures are no happenstance. And the beauties follow a daily food pattern that makes for stamina and sparkle—a quart of milk; an egg; meat, chicken, or fish; whole-grains; butter; fruits—one always oranges or grapefruit; and plenty of vegetables, both cooked and raw.

Geldwyn Reducing Menus

It's good to hear Hollywood advocating safe and sure reducing on menus planned around the protective foods. Here's a sample day's reducing diet from a Goldwyn Girl's notebook:

BREAKFAST: Poached egg on buttered wholewheat toast, glass of milk or cafe-au-lait (hot milk and strong coffee, half-and-half) with saccharine, orange juice or half grapefruit.

LUNCH: Hot cheese open sandwich on one slice rye bread toast, lettuce and tomato salad (no dressing), glass of milk, large apple.

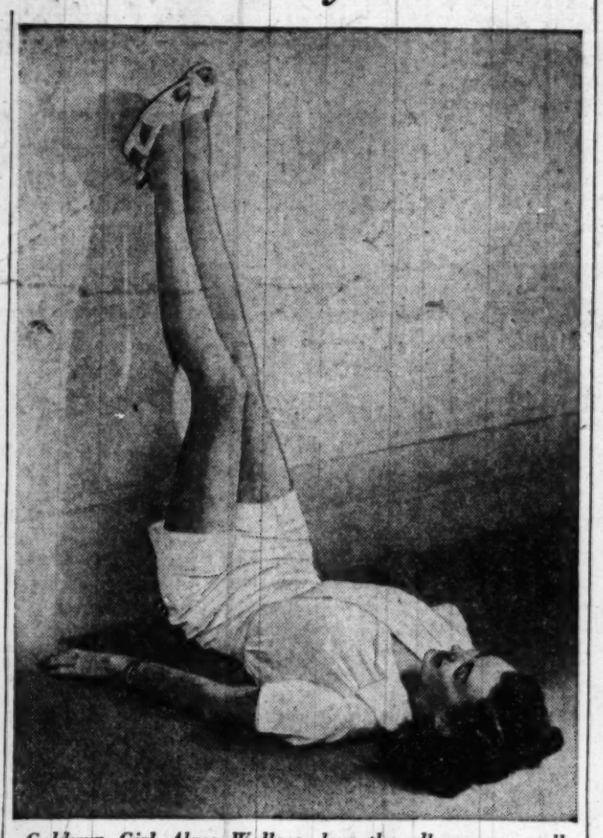
BEDTIME: Glass of hot milk.

This adds up to approximately 1200 calories a day.



Goldwyn Girl Alace Wallace does the all-purpose, wall bicycle exercise: Shoot alternate legs up and down wall as arms are raised back overhead and returned to sides. To straighten sway back, press small of back to floor

"Ah-h! I Can Breathe Again!"

When your nose fills up with a stuffy head cold or occasional congestion, put a few drops of Vicks Va-tro-nol in each nostril and get comforting relief almost instantly! Va-tro-nol is so effective because it works right where trouble is to soothe irritation, relieve stuffiness, make breathing easier. Try it! Get Vicks Va-tro-nol Nose Drops!

Homemaking Hints

A little salt added to the bluing will prevent the clothes from being streaked with color.

Never neglect to strain the dye before tinting colored materials and the goods will take evenly.

A bowl of lime in the closet with the preserves and jellies will prevent mold from forming on the tops of the jars.

Annapolis Activities

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Dec. 13, 1948.

Rear Admiral and Mrs. James L. Holloway, jr., have visiting them at the superintendent's quarters at the Naval Academy, their son-in-law and daughter, Lieut. and Mrs. Lawrence Heyworth, jr., and their grandson, Lawrence Heyworth 3d.

Lieutenant Heyworth is attached to the Sicily Air Group.

"The Torch Bearers," this year's dramatic production of the Naval Academy Women's Club, was given its final presentation Saturday in Mahan Hall, the Naval Academy Auditorium, playing to a capacity audience. It received the same enthusiastic reception which marked the premiere on Wednesday, December 8, and the performance on Thursday of this week.

Service Sorority Ushers

Members of Tau Omicron Phi, service sorority, and a group of Navy juniors acted as usherettes at the three performances. These girls included: Robin Ellershaw, Abee Crenshaw, Betty Schumacher, Jackie Weber, Betty McCormick, Dot Emery, Carol Melgaard, Betsy McNair, Sally Welch, Millie Smith, Betsy Rogers, Charlotte Ewald, Betsy Mattie, Pat Halpine, Claude Handy, Phyllis Hayter, Nancy Freeman, Elspeth Norgaard, Barbara Jones, Phyllis Freeman, Janie Ward, Mary Lou Fiala, Mary Glenden Newton, Alice Bayer, June Jenkins and Frances and Tennie Wuebbens.

MRS. ALBERT KONIGSBERG received the midshipmen of the first, second and third classes and their guests at the hop held Saturday night, December 4, in Dahlgren Hall, the Naval Academy Armory, with dancing from 9:15 to 1 a. m.

The dining hall at Severn School was the scene of a dance sponsored by the Severn Anchor, the school paper, on Saturday night, December 4. Tables were set up in cabaret sytle and the decorations were most attractive. The students and their guests enjoyed dancing from 9 p. m. to 1 a. m.

Vesper Concert Set

The choir of the First Presbyterian Church, under the direction of Mrs. Kenneth L. Palmquist, will present a vesper Christmas concert on December 12. The program, which will begin at 5 p.m. will consist of sacred music appropriate to the Christmas season.

Party Luncheon Tips

Shirred eggs, chicken livers and scalloped tomatoes make a delicious main course for a party luncheon. Let a tossed green salad, hard rolls and butter, dessert and a beverage complete the menu. The dessert might be an apple cobbler with hard sauce or fresh pears baked with spices and brown sugar.

The Family Scrapbook

By Dr. Ernest G. Osborne

Children to Be Enjoyed

Sometimes we parents take our job of raising children so seriously that we get no fun from living been made to fear that we have been made to fear that he have to watch every move lest we warp the child's growing personality. Perhaps our concern with "training" the child in good habits takes all the joy out of being with him.

It's important to enjoy children. One of the deepest satisfactions can come from watching the ways in which they enjoy life. Feeding peanuts to squirrels, dropping bread crumbs for birds, or just running and shouting for the pure joy of it are the kind of child activities that can be fun for parents to watch.

It is also satisfying to see our youngsters beginning to grow up, to understand more of the world about them than they have before.

It's a good idea, then, to replace some of the concern about our children's development with sheer enjoyment of them. To relax and to appreciate their eager curiosity, their developing sense of humor, their love for active play can bring us renewed youth and make us better parents.

THE DISTRICT LINE by Bill Gold

Some Folks See Quite Well in the Dark

Peggy Feyling confesses that, when night falls, she loses her sense of direction.

The other dusk, Peggy found herself in mid-town Washington—and in her usual predicament. So she spied a man standing in front of a church, and asked directions.

The man gave the directions quickly and courteously, and Peggy continued on her way.

MAIL BAG

Dear Bill:

This is a rather unusual request for help.

I am trying to locate a merry-go-round horse for my 7-year-old daughter.

She wants a pony, but since we have no place to keep one, she'll settle for a wooden horse. But where does one go to buy one?

Mrs. Roland C. Brown,
Fort Belvoir, Va.

Dear Mrs. Brown:

I don't know, but ask Vince Pizzi, the fellow who runs the Hampshire View Barbershop (corner of East-West hwy. and New Hampshire ave. extended) Takoma Park, Md. Vince has one of those horses rigged up as a barber chair for his younger clients. Bill.

TIME BRINGS ALL THINGS

The new look in wrist watches leaves no doubt about the mechanical genius of our age. The most popular models these days do everything but brew coffee.

They give the hour, minute and second, just like ordinary watches. But in addition, they split seconds into fifths and register the month, date, day of the week and phase of the moon.

For the forgetful, they ring an alarm bell. And they may also be used as stop-watches and tachometers, for such purposes as timing the speed of your airplane.

If you don't have an airplane, a tie-in sale can be arranged.

These handy little timepieces are shockproof, waterproof, dustproof—and wind themselves. They do everything for you except meet the weekly payments.

The only reason I don't buy one is that I can never figure out what time they say it is.

Besides, I figure that anybody who doesn't know the month has no business worrying about seconds.

PERSONAL NOTES

Anonymous: The family is already being helped, privately, and it would be inadvisable to ask for public contributions for them. There are hundreds of such deserving cases, but no newspaper can undertake to help all of them. I am forwarding your donation to them, and hope that you'll understand.

Pat Swain, 1131 N. Kensington st., Arlington, Va.: An excellent idea. Tell your sorority that the Travelers' Aid Society can use help for a mother and five children, who all need warm clothing. The society can also furnish the names of folks who need food. Call Lucille Bruner on Executive 7666.

OH TO BE IN ALABAMA, NOW THAT IT'S WINTER AGAIN!

Irving Cooper of 2916 Georgia ave. nw. thinks that this classified ad from one of our afternoon contemporaries deserves wider circulation:

"ONE PAIR man's shoes, size 14. Reason for selling: Going back to Alabama."

MOVIE CRITIC

Having just returned from the Little Theater and a performance of the current version of Hamlet, Aitch Ess of 17 Elmira st. se. observes:

"No matter how you slice him, he's still Polonius."

GIVE-AWAYS

"Two very cute female kittens, about 3 months old; will deliver." (Overlook 2621).

"Handsome gray tiger cat; refuses to accept new French poodle." (Emerson 8724).

"Playful, affectionate all-white female kitten." (Shepherd 1180).

CHAMBERS MARCHES ON

Whitty, Whitty, Pumpkin City,
Had some films that weren't pretty;
Hid 'em in a pumpkin shell
Till he thought he ought to tell.

MAIL AND FEMALE

It's a pity that so many drivers of U. S. Mail trucks have so little regard for the safety and rights of other people who use the streets.

Ordinarily, the Postoffice Department does a corking good job. But this lunatic-fringe minority seems to think that the departmental motto is:

"Not snow, nor rain, nor heat, nor common sense driving habits shall stay these couriers from the swift completion of their appointed rounds."

I know the mails have to go through, but I'm not keen about having them go right through me.

Women drivers who thought I was overly critical of their driving habits may now observe how impartial I am. Now I'm criticizing mail drivers.

VAGRANT THOUGHT

Wonder how many girls who looked forward to Leap Year so that they could propose—actually did?

Listen to Bill Gold's "This Is Washington," the District Line on the Air, Monday through Friday, over WTOP, from 10 a. m. to Arthur Godfrey time at 10:30.

Leonard Lyons . . .

NEW YORK.—A few years ago when William Saroyan was producing and directing a series of his own plays, David O. Selznick offered him the services of Jennifer Jones, for $75 a week. Saroyan, however, had his own unique casting ideas and his own wife-to-be, Carol Marcus, who got a leading role. Another leading role in "Talking to You," was given to Lilian McGuinness, a hat-check girl at the Stork Club. She won a good notice from her favorite Stork Club customer, George Jean Nathan, and then sought jobs in other plays . . . Miss McGuinness is back in the Stork Club cloak-room. "I'm happier in this business," she said yesterday. "There are too many people in the theater."

One Sunday Herb Polesie, the radio producer, gave a party at his home for Pat O'Brien. The entertainment featured a tumbling and acrobatic act, during which Fay Emerson revealed her ability to lift Elliott Roosevelt and another 200 pounder at the same time. "I'd rather not have it publicized, though," said Miss Emerson. "Strength in a woman is unglamorous. I'd rather be known for my dimples than my muscles" . . . While Roosevelt was doing a back flip and handspring act with Joe E. Brown, the 280-pound Toots Shor entered the room, met the flying Rooseevlt head-on, and Roosevelt now has a large scarred bump on his forehead as a memento of the meeting.

The book reviewers for the New Yorker magazine usually give such rough treatment to authors that when H. Allen Smith read the review on his new book, "Larks in the Popcorn," he rushed home to Mount Kisco in exctiement. "This is terrific," he shouted to Mrs. Smith, waving a copy of the magazine. "Terrific. I got a so-so review in the New Yorker."

Moss Hart and Kitty Carlisle, the parents of Christopher Hart, were in Sardi's yesterday, showing photos of their son to Arlene Francis. Miss Francis, whose son, Peter, is 20 months old, suggested: "Our sons should get together in the afternoon" . . . "How can we manage it?" Hart asked. "Kitty's in rehearsal, you're busy with your radio show, and I'm writing" . . . "I'll arrange it," Miss Francis proposed. I'll put a dollar bill in Peter's teeth and send him up in a cab."

Real Estate Lobby Set for Action

By Drew Pearson

Unlike the Supreme Court, the real estate lobby does not believe in noting the election returns. Working diligently and secretly, the real estate boys have now recruited an army of 3300 amateur lobbyists to bombard Washington with a last-ditch stand against public housing and rent control.

Pearson

This new lobbying force has been handpicked on the basis of personal friendship with influential Congressmen. They are scattered throughout the grass-roots so as to make the movement appear spontaneous, and their names are carefully guarded until housing D-day before Congress.

Meanwhile, Cal Snyder, chief lobbyist for the National Association of Real Estate Boards, is boasting that the lobby will defeat President Truman's housing program again—by at least 30 votes in the House.

The coalition of Republicans and Southern Democrats boasts Snyder will still be able to block public housing and rent control in the new Congress. While he may not want it published, Snyder spoke off the record before the secretaries' council of the National Association of Real Estate Boards recently.

"Remember," he jubilated, "that Roosevelt had a Democratic Congress in 1938, and he asked a billion dollars for public housing. Roosevelt was a pretty smooth operator, but he didn't get the money for housing. There was a Democratic Congress again in '40, and they didn't get it. In '42 and '44 they didn't get it, either."

"Now is not the time to compromise," Snyder sounded the new battle cry. "Now is the time to get in there and punch. Now is the time, if you'll pardon the expression, to adopt the tactics of Harry Truman in the election. Get in there and fight."

Snyder is counting upon the army of 3300 newly recruited, home-town lobbyists to turn the tide. They will not register as lobbyists but operate as Congressmen's constituents.

In most cases, Congressmen won't even realize they are dealing with lobbyists controlled from Washington. They will be close personal friends of the Congressmen, picked because they can influence votes.

To finance this operation, the National Association of Real Estate Boards is asking $5 a head from its members. This should swell the total lobbying kitty to more than $200,000. In most cases, however, the lobbyist-constituent will pay his own way to Washington.

Lobby Rollcall

This grass-roots army doesn't mean that the real estate lobby is doing away with its "commando squad" already operating on Capitol Hill. These professionals represent every phase of home building, and in order that new Congressmen may know who they are, here is a list of the key real estate lobbyists:

Doug Whitlock—Chunky, genial, glad-hander for the Building Products Institute, which supplies materials for building homes.

Frank Cortwright—Suave, dignified executive vice president for the National Association of Home Builders, which builds the homes.

Herb Nelson—Shrewd executive vice president for the National Association of Real Estate Boards, which sells the homes. His chief working lobbyist is Cal Snyder, who spins yarns and manipulates votes with the best of them. Another teammate is slender, young Albert Payne, who does most of the paper and leg work.

Morton Bodfish—Astute kingfish of them all. He represents the United States Savings and Loan League, which finances the homes.

Herbert Brill—Executive secretary of the New York City Metropolitan Fair Rent Committee. Discharged from the Army as a captain, he still refers to himself as "Captain Brill."

These are the men whom President Truman once branded as the worst lobby in Washington and who are girded for last-ditch action when Congress convenes January 3.

When a newsman mistakenly reported that White House Press Secretary Charlie Ross tried to sell his Washington home before the election, Ross raised the White House roof. He grumbled to the President and beefed at staff meetings for three days.

Finally at the 9 a. m. meeting of the White House staff, the President's military aide, convivial Gen. Harry Vaughan, blurted:

"Mr. President, I can't help making the observation that during these past months when myself, Admiral Leahy, General Graham and some of the rest of us have taken knocke like that, our press secretary was mildly offended and largely amused. But as soon as he gets a mild scratch on the shins he yells like a stuck pig."

In writing his memoirs, Maj. Gen. Claire Chennault, former Flying Tiges' chief, started to include a story which the history books had missed. Then he cut out all but a vague reference—upon direct orders from Mme. Chiang Kai-shek.

It has never been told before, but Chennault personally flew against the Japs long before he organized his famed Flying Tigers. Madame Chiang even went shopping to buy a plane for him, paid Curtiss-Wright $55,000 for a trim Hawk Special—forerunner of the P-36.

As early as 1937 the steel-jawed Chennault went gunning for Japs in this private fighter plane, and Madame Chiang paid him $500 for each Jap he shot down. In those early skirmishes Chennault bagged 30 Jap planes for a total of $15,000.

The rugged China ace decided to tell this story in his forthcoming memoirs, but Madame Chiang put her foot down. She would only permit Chennault to say that the Madame had bought him a plane. However, he slipped in this guarded hint: "It was in the Hawk Special that I got my first taste of Jap flak and fighter tactics, and that I learned some of the lessons that later saved many an American pilot's life over China."

Let Us Give

In every town and city now . . . A drive is under way . . . So Santa Claus will not forget . . . The poor on Christmas Day . . . A drive for clothes to keep them warm . . . And food to help them live . . . According to the quantity . . . That we decide to give . . . Their happiness depends upon . . . Whatever we may share . . . Of groceries or garments or . . . The money we can spare . . . So let us be as generous . . . And kindly as we can . . . And do as much as possible . . . For every fellowman . . . Each bit of clothing, food or cash . . . Will warm a humble heart . . . And God will bless us many times . . . For having done our part.
